Maggie Eastwood rediscovers life

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

MAGGIE EASTWOOD is in the midst of discovery.

She welcomes life like the sky greets the morning sun — and she's not afraid to jump in feet first.

"I feel now that I've come into my own," she said. "I have my own space that I can move around in and call my own shots — and it's comfortable."

Tall, slim and quite pretty, Mrs. Eastwood is very involved with Transitions, a health studio in Pacific Grove of which she is co-owner. She credits this involvement with helping her through a very rough period of her life.

While doing her warm-up exercises, Mrs. Eastwood said: "I'm a very physical person. I'm also a Libra and a lover of beauty and that includes the body. I'm also very sensitive to color, sound, shape and texture — and along with that goes how I feel about myself. I want to do everything I can to look and feel as good as possible."

LEGALLY SEPARATED from her husband, movie star Clint Eastwood, for the past couple of years, Mrs. Eastwood's

'When you first separate it's like part of your life is gone and it's not a very comfortable feeling.'

interest in health goes back to the early days of her marriage.

"Clint and I would go to The Good Life, a health food store in North Hollywood, long before it was fashionable," she said. "At that time you were considered a bit of a kook if you were into health foods — but we've both always been very health conscious and as soon as we could afford a gym we put one in our home."

Currently a resident of Pebble Beach, Mrs. Eastwood said that she first saw and fell in love with Carmel while on her honeymoon in 1953.

"Clint had just gotten out of the Army at Fort Ord and was oriented with this area," she explained. "He had managed a swimming pool at Fort Ord and really loved being near the water. He said then that some day he wanted to live here."

Mrs. Eastwood met her husband on a blind date while attending the University of California in Berkeley. They met in early 1953 and were married that December.

She recalled that the early days of her marriage had helped prepare her for life as a single person after they separated.

"Clint was under contract to Universal Studios, but he was just getting started," said Mrs. Eastwood. "We rented a small apartment in Studio City and I wanted to help out so I took a job in an office. Sitting all day drove me bananas, so I started modeling for sportswear and swimwear houses such as Cole, Catalina, John of California and others."

Mrs. Eastwood said that since her husband was an actor she also tried her hand in that field. "I knew it wasn't my thing, but I took acting classes anyway," she said. "I soon discovered that I really didn't want to become an actress. I had no talents that I could discern and I had a terrible time remembering lines."

Although Mrs. Eastwood decided to stick with her modeling she did work as an extra on the Jimmy Durante Show each Saturday. "Jimmy was a close friend of ours and I made more money in one day than I did working all week long," she commented.

Recalling the early days of her marriage, Mrs. Eastwood said that "like everyone else we had our good and our bad times. Prior to getting the lead in Rawhide, Clint was unemployed for two years. He collected unemployment, but the sitting around and waiting was driving him crazy."

"Even after he shot the first 10 episodes of Rawhide, they sat in the can for a long time and he had no idea what they were going to do with them. Finally they decided to go ahead with the series and that solved most of our financial problems."

"Those early years were rough," said Mrs. Eastwood. "Clint did odd jobs and cleaned swimming pools while I worked as a model. But we worked together on it and had a lot of fun times."

WHEN ASKED if being married to a celebrity made it harder to accomplish her own goals, Mrs. Eastwood said: "It can if you allow it to. If both of you are involved in heavy things it can draw you apart. I really don't envy anyone that's famous and can't move around and do their own thing. I've seen it form the inside and it's really tough. They have pressures that people don't understand and it's hard to exist in a normal way."

Mrs. Eastwood said that although being married to a celebrity has its benefits — it's not the rose-colored world that most people think. She expressed it best in her husband's words:

"He had a terrible cold one morning and a 5 a.m. call. The scene called for him to work on location with a bunch of horses. He just looked at me and said, 'It's not all wearing sunglasses and signing autographs, is it?'"

Mrs. Eastwood said that the world of movie-making can be a very strange world. "It can be very synthetic and not everyone can deal with it," she said. "It's interesting and challenging, but it can also be a tough situation to deal with all the time."

Asked if it was hard to function as a single person after being married 26 years, Mrs. Eastwood said: "Yes. I think that's one of the most difficult parts of the whole thing — after all that time to find yourself single and totally supposedly independent whether you felt independent or not. I think I'm coping with it fine now, but at first I found it shattering. When you first separate it's like part of your life is gone and it's not a very comfortable feeling."

Working at Transitions has helped Mrs. Eastwood overcome the impact of the separation.

"That's one of the reasons we named it Transitions," she said. "So many people are in transition from one thing to another. They have problems, stresses and strains that they're not particularly fond of and coming here helps them get it out in both a physical and mental way."

Along with working out at her studio almost daily, Mrs. Eastwood is also an avid skier and tennis player.

"I was very ill at one point in my life with a bad case of hepatitis," she said. "It took about a year to get over it and when it was over I felt terrible. I knew I had to do something to build myself up so I started taking tennis lessons. It worked and now I play three or four times each week."

MRS. EASTWOOD also spends a lot of time with her two children, Kyle, 12, and Alison, 8.

Her son enjoys tennis and soccer, while daughter is more interested in horses.

"We also bike through the forest and we're all movie buffs," said Mrs. Eastwood. "I'm very close to my children and we talk about everything and anything. They also have a great relationship with their father and he adores them."

Mrs. Eastwood said she was married 14 years before having her first child.

"We were both moving people and didn't think we could manage in a one-room apartment," she said. "We decided that we wouldn't have kids until we could afford help. It may not be the answer for everyone, but it was for us. There may also be disadvantages to being older and having younger children, but right now they're at a fantastic age — and we're all having fun."

Mrs. Eastwood said that during her marriage she kept a low profile because her husband preferred it that way. "He had

'I'm also a Libra and a lover of beauty and that includes the body.'

this thing about being a loner — like I kind of didn't exist at times," she said. "He's a very complex person and I knew he didn't want publicity on his family — and I was in complete agreement on that."

Her big, blue eyes took on a serious tone when she talked about separation and friends.

"You do discover who your real friends are and they become extremely valuable to you," she said. "You end up becoming as involved in their lives as they are in yours. I wouldn't recommend going through divorce or separation to anyone, but it does have a good side. It sort of jolts you around and you come up with a system of values — you're more sturdy and have more empathy for other people and their problems. More so than if you had not had the shaking experience."

On being a happy person, Mrs. Eastwood said that for the first time in her life she has come into her own.

"I was a very timid person naturally and being married to someone so overwhelming — as to what was going on in Clint's life — made my situation harder. I never really resented it, but I don't think I let myself develop in total ways. I'd start various things but never carry through."

Mrs. Eastwood said that she now thinks that before a woman totally commits herself to marriage and family life she should find out what she's really interested in and what she can do as a person.

"Rather than going right from school into marriage, I think it's better for you in the long run if you develop yourself as a person," said Mrs. Eastwood. "Then if anything happens or you want to go into another field you will already have some insight into it."

ONE HOBBY Mrs. Eastwood would like to get back into is painting.

She took classes from John Cunningham at the Carmel Art Institute, but doesn't consider her work good enough for a showing.

"When Clint and I were first married he'd be on location and I'd stay up half the night painting," she remembered. "Frequently I'd go on location with him to such places as Europe and Spain, and I'd snap pictures then bring them home and paint them. Right now I enjoy hanging them on my walls and thinking about the things I was thinking about when I first painted them."

Mrs. Eastwood's other interests include being a foster parent to two children the same ages as her own in foreign countries, supporting wounded veterans and Save the Seals.

She also takes an active interest in politics and said she is thrilled that Ronald Reagan won the presidency.

ON THE ERA movement, Mrs. Eastwood said she has mixed feelings.

"I do believe in equal rights for women, but I'm not sure that it's always gone about in the right way," she said, adding that she was not suggesting that she would know how to go about promoting it. "I do feel," she said, "it's done a lot of good in the country."

On the question of age, Mrs. Eastwood, who is "in her 40s," said, "The older you get the harder you have to work at looking good and staying healthy. I have a friend in her 60s who looks fantastic — and there's no reason we can't all be that way if we're willing to give the necessary time and energy. You have to decide in your own mind that it's worth it."

Mrs. Eastwood does not back away from the question of romance in her life. She said the man she dates most frequently is Los Angeles businessman Henry Wynberg.

"We've been going together for quite a while now and I really like him," she said. "We enjoy each other's company and we're easy together. As to the future, I can't say yes or not to anything right now because I don't know myself."

When asked if there was a possibility of another marriage for her, she replied: "Yes. I do think I will marry again — definitely!"

Her plans include keeping everything in good shape — mentally, physically, socially and her business. "I want to keep my life going on an upward trend," she said. "I'm not a social butterfly, but I do enjoy entertaining and going to some parties."

Plan would curb tourist trade expansions

By JOANNE HODGEN

PLANNING Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson may have a partial solution to what many consider problems caused by expansion of tourist-oriented businesses in Carmel.

At a meeting of the Carmel Planning Commission, Wednesday, Dec. 17, he asked for a study to determine the feasibility of re-zoning the C-1-S district (motels, residential units and retail) to C-1-L (motels and residential) only.

The Commission has been searching for ways to control the growth of tourist-oriented business.

Setting minimum distances between like businesses and limiting the number of similar businesses has been considered, Davidson told the commission, but "it all seems extremely difficult to do."

However, re-zoning has not been considered, he noted.

Davidson weighed the desirability of motels and residential units next to the central business district, noting that hostelry taxes may be a more stable income for the city than retail sales tax.

The study will focus on "the city's income from retail and hostelry taxes and the direction we might go in providing some sense of security in a financial way," Davidson said, then added, "and, the proliferation of business sites."

He said he wants to determine whether retail sales and hostelry taxes have increased only because of inflation or because of real growth in the city.

Though he said he was told by city Finance Officer Jim Bajari that the figures would be difficult to determine, Davidson observed if it appears inflation is the only growth factor "we must protect what we have."

Income from the hostelry and retail sales taxes are relatively

'The most desirable visitors are the ones who house themselves in the community.'

equal, he said. "Which of those provides the most secure income?" Davidson asked.

"If we have a depression, we can determine the hostelry tax is the most consistent.

"We have less and less attraction for people we want to have in the community. The most desirable visitors are the ones who house themselves in the community."

Visitors who stay at hotels in the Valley or in Monterey must take excursions into Carmel, he said, generating more traffic and parking problems.

The idea of stopping the growth of motels "may have been right in 1956," he said.

"To my way of thinking, the idea we do not need more motels is insane."

Customers in the retail district have been declining in quality, according to Davidson.

Pointing at the zoning map, Davidson asked, "Why not take all the yellow zone (C-1-S) and make it turn blue (C-1-L)?"

He said additional motel rooms would attract visitors who contribute to the community.

Davidson noted that re-zoning would also provide a buffer area between the central business district, C-1-C, and the residential zone.

PLANNING Director Bob Griggs explained that the C-1-S zone has been "strongly developed into motel use."

Intrigued by Davidson's idea, commissioners agreed it deserved further study.

Commissioner Arthur Mertens said the motel occupancy rates should also be studied.

However, Commissioner John Logan observed that of the 928 motel rooms in Carmel each generates about $1,000 in hostelry taxes for the city during the fiscal year. "It looks like it is close to 100 percent occupancy," he said.

The re-zoning proposal could encompass or touch on about 13 blocks from Third Avenue to Eighth and Torres to Monte Verde.

Griggs said after the meeting that most property owners consider motels the best use of the property in Carmel. Evidence, he said, is the fact that areas zoned for retail and motels generally have motels.

"All it (re-zoning) does is prevent the further spread of retail sales," Griggs observed.

An example, he said, would be if a developer decided the block along Mission between Third and Fourth could become Christmas baby Laney Dowlen and her baby, Evans, 11 months.

'Christmas baby' gets a double treat

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

"MY BIRTHDAY STARTS when the Christmas decorations go up and lasts until they come down.

"It's especially nice because I never have to cook or wash dishes on that one day of the year. Being born on Christmas really does have advantages — and to me it's always been very special."

Laney Dowlen's eyes sparkled as she talked about being a "Christmas baby." She is celebrating her 28th birthday today and admits she's been shaking the gaily-wrapped packages under the Christmas tree for some time.

"My mother was determined that I would be born on Christmas Day," said Mrs. Dowlen.

"On Christmas Eve she ate a huge dinner in hopes of inducing labor. A few hours later she happily told my father that her idea had worked and he rushed her to the hospital."

Mrs. Dowlen said her mother's high hopes were soon dashed as the labor was a false alarm.

"It was 4:30 in the morning and she rushed right back home to make sure that my 18-month-old brother, Bobby, could celebrate his first real Christmas," Mrs. Dowlen said. "Two hours later she went back to the hospital and I was born at 7 a.m."

Mrs. Dowlen and her husband, Gene, moved to Carmel in 1976 and just recently built their first home in Pebble Beach. They have two children — Matthew, 3½, and daughter, Evans, who will be a year old next month.

Mrs. Dowlen said her family always makes sure her birthday receives special attention. The event is celebrated with a special Christmas breakfast, when she opens her birthday gifts.

"MY HUSBAND really pulled a fast one last year," she said.

"He gave me one ski boot for my birthday and the other as my Christmas gift. He was just trying to be funny as he always makes sure that I have extra gifts and even gives me something special on his own birthday."

Mrs. Dowlen said her family has tried to give her unusual gifts. "One of the nicest was when my uncle took me to Snowmass, Colo., to celebrate my sweet-16 birthday," she said. "His friend had a daughter my age and we learned to ski."

Mrs. Dowlen also celebrates her birthday by buying a special ornament for the Christmas tree each year. "It's like adding another year to my life, and each year I look at the ornaments and each one reminds me of certain events in my life," she said.

MRS. DOWLEN was the middle child in her family; she has two brothers.

"They've always understood that I don't get presents on their birthday so they don't get extra presents on mine," she said. "When it began to cause a squabble my mother decided to celebrate my birthday a few days early. One year she switched it to June, but it just wasn't the same so she switched it back to December."

A birthday cake is a must, said Mrs. Dowlen. "My mother always made my cake until I got the courage to tell her that I wanted one from a bakery like all my friends," she said. "She was delighted with the idea and even now she still orders them made up."

Because of her choice of bakery cakes, Mrs. Dowlen almost didn't have one on her last birthday. "The big storm came over Christmas and the electricity was out all over town, including the bakery," she said. "But not to be outsmarted, my mother made a very strange ice cream and angel food cake — it was delicious!"

Both Mrs. Dowlen and her husband were born and raised in Miami. The couple, along with other family members, moved to this area to run Wendy's Hamburger franchises. They have outlets in Watsonville, Salinas and San Francisco.

Even though she now has children of her own, Mrs. Dowlen still finds time on Christmas to think about her own birth and do special things. Along with her family, she attends midnight Mass at All Saints' Episcopal Church and a few hours are set aside on Christmas morning just for her.

"I'm especially happy this year because Matthew is old enough to really enjoy things," said Mrs. Dowlen. "It's the first year that we've had a Christmas tree that sits on the floor and I'm as happy about it as Matt is."

As always, the traditional Christmas dinner will be held at the home of Mrs. Dowlen's parents, Sarah and Bob Bonner. Joining in the celebration will be her brother Bob and his wife, Cindy, and their son, Bobby; her younger brother, Clifton, and her grandmother, Mrs. Ora Bonner of Pacific Grove.

When asked what she would like as a Christmas gift next year, Mrs. Dowlen replied: "I feel very fortunate and I'm very grateful for all the happiness I have this year. My wish for next year would be just to still be around and share love with those dearest to me."

"Life really is a gift — and being born on Christmas Day is especially nice."

House fire blamed on fireplace

A FAULTY fireplace has been blamed for a kitchen fire which caused an estimated $40,000 to $50,000 damage to a Carmel home Sunday, Dec. 21.

The house on Ocean between Casanova and Camino Real was rented by Allyne Kendall and Greg McMennamin, fire officials said. The owner's name was not immediately available.

Carmel Fire Chief Bob Updike, who estimated damage, said the fire began when heat from the back wall of the fireplace ignited the adjoining wall of the kitchen.

Updike said two engines, a utility pickup and four patrol cars responded to the fire, reported at 9:02 p.m.

The renters, who were not home at the time, had a fire burning throughout the day because of the misty weather, according to Updike.

Updike warned that old fireplaces develop cracks.

Deposition due from Peters

THE MONTEREY County grand jury is not investigating William G. Peters of Carmel Valley in connection with his financial disclosure statements as a candidate for Fifth District supervisor.

Grand Jury Foreman Phillip Nash said the jury was not investigating Peters in connection with a civil lawsuit filed against him by the district attorney.

Peters, elected Fifth District supervisor Nov. 4, was charged in the suit filed by District Attorney William Curtis with failing to properly disclose his involvement in a real estate deal while serving on the county Planning Commission.

The civil suit seeks more than $95,000 in damages from Peters, and has left open the possibility that criminal charges could be filed against him. Curtis has disclaimed any intent to file criminal charges in the case, but he has also said any major decision in the case would have to await a deposition from Peters that was due Dec. 23.

Nash said that while some members of the grand jury had expressed an interest in the Peters' case, he said it was not true that an investigation was begun.

"Until the D.A. says he has something to go on, we're not going ahead with any investigation on criminal conduct," Nash said.

a highly successful commercial area. "You would end up with more traffic and parking problems," Griggs said.

He noted that only 12,000 square feet of property is left to develop in the C-1-S district. An incentive to increase motel rooms, he said, would be to lower the 1,000-square-foot per unit requirement to 750 square feet. Parking would still be required, he said.

Bajari, the finance officer, said he was asked to prepare a report on the inflation factor in retail sales growth in November.

According to Bajari, inflation factors will be calculated for restaurants, apparel shops and other types of businesses in Carmel.

He said at this time it appears that "hostelry taxes will be a stable source of income for the city." He said motels in Carmel have very few vacancies.

The city projects sales tax revenue, returned to Carmel by the state, of $950,000 for fiscal 1980-81. The city expects hostelry (hotels and motels) revenue of $975,000 for 1980-81.

Bajari said earlier that $468,000, or 48 percent of the projected hostelry revenue had been collected, though only one-third of the fiscal year (July through October) had passed.

The Planning Commission will discuss the re-zoning proposal Feb. 25.

AS THE TEMPERATURE GOES DOWN, THE NEED TO BUDGET FOR ENERGY GOES UP.

With the steadily rising costs of natural resources, PG&E is forced to ask for frequent rate increases to offset these costs. This has been a fact of life since 1973—the year of the OPEC oil embargo.

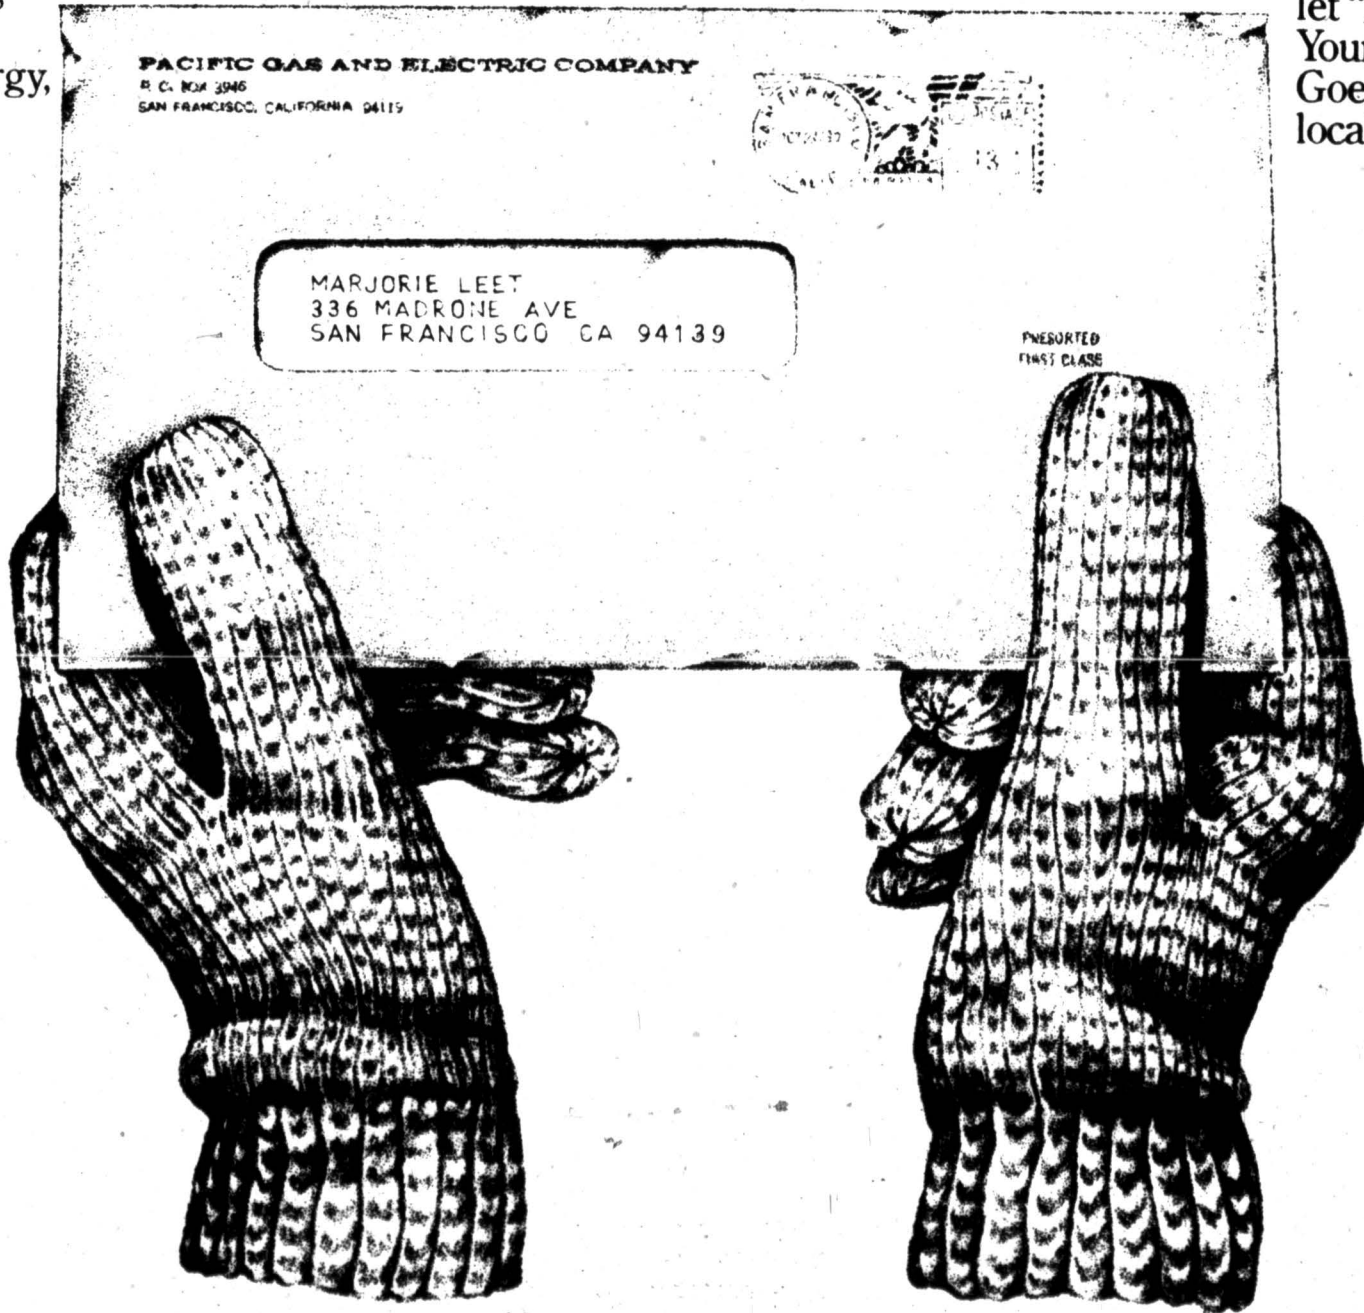

To meet the needs of its customers, PG&E must continue to buy fuel from foreign sources. Oil to generate electricity, and natural gas to heat homes and water. And your bills will continue to reflect the rising cost of these fuels and other expenses.

Since energy costs will not go down, it's becoming more and more important to think seriously about doing three things this winter:

1. Budget for energy, as you would for

- any other major household expense.
2. Become aware of what energy costs before you use it. Know what it costs to run a furnace, a water heater, a dishwasher.
3. Cut back on your use of gas and electricity where you can, because doing so will keep your winter bills from going up as much.

In whatever way we can, PG&E is here to help. If you have extreme difficulty in paying your bill, call your local PG&E office. If you want specific information on what it costs to use appliances, get a copy of the booklet "Know Where Your Energy Dollar Goes" at your local PG&E office.

KNOWING THE FACTS CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.

SEX EDUCATION

Students want a comprehensive curriculum

By STEVE HELLMAN

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL students and their leaders issued a forthright appeal last week for comprehensive sex education.

They packed the Board of Education meeting, calling for a curriculum that covers birth control, masturbation and homosexuality.

Numbering more than half of a standing-room-only crowd, the students demanded that educators, parents and the community provide them with the information that is needed to avoid pregnancy and venereal disease.

Painful experiences were described in voices choked with emotion about schoolmates who had gotten pregnant and had no one to turn to and not enough knowledge to make a wise decision of their own.

It was the largest and most forceful turnout of students at a school board meeting since last year when the athletics program was threatened.

The students clearly were concerned about one aspect of their education that applies directly to their lives. Their requests were supported by many parents and teachers.

The need for comprehensive sex education was also underscored by statistics revealed at the meeting that showed Monterey County to be above state and national averages in teenage pregnancy, the school district to be above average in its number of single-parent families and the rate of abortions among Carmel High School students to be more than expected.

Cautioning, however, against an all-out curriculum and warning against the teaching of morals were several parents who were concerned about encouraging sexual activity among students.

By the time the meeting ended, it appeared the student appeals had made the difference in shifting the board's sentiment toward resuming a comprehensive sex education program at Carmel High School and Middle School.

THE SCHOOL BOARD voiced unanimous support for the curriculum prepared by a blue-ribbon committee of parents, teachers, doctors and students.

The board scheduled action on the program for its Jan. 13 meeting.

Sex education would be incorporated in biology and "project community" courses beginning in the spring semester.

In response to the disturbing statistics on abortion and pregnancy among local teenagers, and to the students' pleasure, the board agreed to consider expanding the curriculum to include more emphasis on birth control. The board also agreed not to avoid discussion of masturbation and homosexuality.

Board Chairman Doyle Clayton said the program should stress good decision-making and provide the information on birth control and other areas of sexuality to facilitate good decisions.

"It's not up to us to hold back the information," he declared. "The students have a right to choose."

He noted that among 16-year-olds in Monterey County in

'A lot of kids are getting pregnant.'

1978, one out of 24 gave live births. For 17-year-olds, the figure was one in 14.

Clayton added that government statistics also showed 14 out of 100 teenagers in the county become pregnant before age 19. "I think we have a problem," he said.

Veteran Trustee Frances Gaver said the schools must shoulder the responsibility of educating students about their sexuality.

She noted that 30 percent of the families in the district are run by single parents, a figure 50 percent above the national average.

"This fact alone has quite an implication on the responsibility of the schools," she said.

Trustees Ron Parravano and Ken White both called for the program to include the three most sensitive topics, ones that had been left out by the committee: masturbation, homosexuality and birth control. They said the program would not be complete without covering those topics.

IT WAS high school counselor Louise Tanous who shocked the meeting with a report that a local doctor had informed her Nov. 12 that he had already performed his 11th abortion on Carmel High School students.

She would not elaborate on the time frame for the abortions.

Paige Thomson, Association Student Body president and co-chairman of the School Site Council, led off the student presentations.

Calling for support of the proposed curriculum, Miss Thomson also said it should include information on contraception, homosexuality and masturbation.

"The consensus among kids is that they lack knowledge on these three things," she said. "A lot of kids are getting pregnant."

Ignorance is not the best way for students to face the world. Miss Thomson insisted. "It's not going to prevent mistakes."

Brenna Rozell complained that students are not receiving any sex education.

"It's frustrating not to be able to answer questions that your friends have," she said.

Lynn McDonald, another student, said she had a couple of pregnant friends and the lack of knowledge of what to do had been painful.

"I'm tired," she declared, "of my friends not knowing what to do."

Nicole Tostevin, a student representative on the School Site Council and the student body representative to the school board, said there were many students who needed the information.

'The students have a right to choose.'

"You can't get a little pregnant," she observed.

Brad Morse, another student, said, "We should know about it (sexuality) because sooner or later we're going to get involved with it."

In a voice choking with emotion, Holly Tanous summed up what many students had said about their lack of knowledge in a subject that means more to their lives than ancient history.

"There are a lot of single parents," she blurted, "who go out with their boyfriends and their kids are going around with unanswered questions."

"There are a lot of parents," she continued nearly breaking into tears, "who don't even talk to their kids about school and their friends."

"Hardly anything is ever said about sex."

CHS teacher is comfortable with the subject

By STEVE HELLMAN

SUE WILLIAMS-PIERIK, a sex education teacher at Carmel High School, says she is comfortable with the subject despite its emotional, sensitive and sometimes painful nature.

Ms. Williams-Pierik, 36, is in her 11th year at the high school as a home economics teacher. She first taught sex education seven years ago as a section of her "Project Community Course."

If the Board of Education of the Carmel schools approves a proposed sex education curriculum for the high school, Ms. Williams-Pierik will again teach it as a part of the popular community skills course. Biology teacher Howard Sanborn will also teach sex education as part of his science course.

The Project Community Course deals with everything from birth to death in helping a student learn to function as a productive, positive member of the community, Ms. Williams-Pierik said in an interview last week.

From real life experiences to learning about government agencies and how a community works, the course is designed to define the student's role in a community, she said. Marriage, family and birth are integral parts of the course, and it is in that section that she deals with sexuality.

The overall purpose is to equip students with the knowledge that will help them think for themselves, she said.

The main concern of students is about learning how to communicate with the opposite sex, Ms. Williams-Pierik said.

"The question is often asked, 'How do I know if I'm in love?'" she said.

Despite the women's liberation movement and increasing permissiveness in society, Ms. Williams-Pierik said students still view marriage as very important.

"They really believe being in love is the most important reason for marrying," she said. "And having children as a part of it."

The difference in students today from previous generations is an earlier involvement in sex and a trend toward believing that some premarital living together is a healthy idea for a happy marriage, she explained.

Venereal disease and pregnancy also top the list of concerns, she said, with students commonly asking specific questions about pregnancy tests or contraceptives.

The new sex education curriculum is expected to include a section on birth control, among other things, and Ms. Williams-Pierik said she will teach the benefits as well as the dangerous side-effects of the different methods. For the source of contraceptives and more detailed information, she said she will refer the student to an appropriate agency or clinic.

Bringing in physicians to handle the questions on birth control has also proven very helpful, she said.

Her role as teacher, she said, is to provide the most accurate and honest information for the student to make wise decisions about birth control, and that includes encouraging boys to be as concerned and responsible about birth control as the girls.

WHILE SHE SAID that a key part of her role as sex education teacher is answering many kinds of questions, Ms. Williams-Pierik said she has rarely been confronted with blunt questions like: Should I go to bed with my boyfriend or girlfriend?

"I've never had a kid ask that point blank," she said.

"Most of their questions are cloaked."

A female student, for example, might ask if her girlfriend missed a period does it mean she is pregnant, she explained.

Popularity is a big issue, and students in the sex education course are often simply concerned that there might be something wrong with them if they do not date, Ms. Williams-Pierik said.

Married, although without children of her own, Ms. Williams-Pierik said that her most important credential in teaching sex education is that she is comfortable with the material, honest and able to give accurate information.

"Students are perceptive," she said. "They can tell if you're comfortable with the material."

She views her role as vitally important for students who are either afraid to seek answers on sexuality from their parents who can be too judgmental, or from officials who are intimidating, she said.

"It's important that students have somebody that they can talk to, be honest with and who'll have accurate information," she said.

"A lot of kids just cannot talk to their parents about everything."

Openness is important in the classroom, she said, along with a respect for each other's opinions and the use of proper language.

By comparison to what she considers the positive approach in the proposed curriculum for the high school, Ms. Williams-Pierik recalled the sex education she received in her parochial high school.

"The nuns were so uncomfortable with the material, they had the chaplain teach sex education," she said. "He wasn't any more comfortable."

In her seven years teaching sex education, she said only one parent has called her to complain. She recalled that the woman was concerned about her daughter.

"It was at a time when there was a parting of the ways in values between the mother and daughter, and the mother was holding on for all it was worth," she recalled.

The woman asked Ms. Williams-Pierik what she would do if the daughter asked about going to bed with her boyfriend, she said.

"I said I would be as non-specific as possible, give her daughter as much information to make her own decision for herself," Ms. Williams-Pierik said.

The parent did not like the answer, she said.

"The mother just said, 'I don't want my daughter thinking for herself.'"

CHS student gets new perspective after her 2,500-mile field trip

By STEVE HELLMAN

IRENE MORRIS went on a 2,500-mile field trip that may have changed her life.

The 17-year-old Carmel High School senior journeyed to Washington, D.C., Nov. 16-22 for a face-to-face encounter with the Capitol Hill action that she had only previously seen in textbooks.

Participating in a Washington seminar with high school students from around the country left Ms. Morris with a desire to leave quiet Carmel for an extended stay in the political Babylon.

She described her experiences during an interview at Carmel High School last week — the chance to see action on the floor of Congress, to meet with her representatives and to learn something of the inside drama of politics.

The experiences so impressed her that Ms. Morris said she is now applying to complete her last semester of high school as a Congressional page.

"I WAS TOTALLY overwhelmed," she exclaimed. "All the stuff they feed you in textbooks suddenly becomes real, it takes form."

From the big city that always moves to meeting students from small-town Minnesota to the close-up exchange with her House representative, Leon Panetta, D-Monterey, Ms. Morris said the trip opened her eyes to another world.

"You go there and you don't know what to expect," she confided. "The people have two legs and the sun sets over Washington. It's real. It's nothing like Carmel, escargot city."

Ms. Morris was the sole representative from Carmel High School, selected from several students who applied to go. ("It came down to me and another girl and she got a job so I got to go.")

History teacher Peter Lyon accompanied her, and the pair had their expenses paid by Close-Up, a non-partisan, non-profit forum for involving youth in government.

According to a Close-Up brochure, the Washington-based organization granted 13,500 fellowships to high school students and teachers this year as part of its effort to familiarize youth with lobbying, media, foreign policy, defense, Congress, the judiciary and the executive branch of government.

The object, according to the brochure, is to make Washington the student's temporary classroom and to provide face-to-face discussions with members of the Congress and other branches. Close-Up's fellowships are granted to one student and teacher from selected high schools around the country.

Lyon said this was the first year Carmel High was selected, and it now joins the list of schools that each year can send a student and teacher to Washington on a Close-Up fellowship. The cost for Lyon and Ms. Morris was $723 apiece, Lyon said. He added that other students could have gone if money were available, but except for $150 donated by the Lion's Club, there was not enough money this year for more than himself and Ms. Morris.

Lyon said that next year a fund-raising drive will be started early enough to collect money so that more than one student can attend.

His second trip to Washington, Lyon said of the experience, "It's a city that makes me proud. It's impressive physically. Things are obviously built to last."

The grandiose columnar construction in the Capitol lends to the sensation, Lyon said, of the tremendous weight of government.

"It's so big, so heavy, so many bureaus," he said, "just learning your way around is a challenge."

For Ms. Morris it was an intensive, whirlwind tour that started at 6:45 a.m. each day ("like bootcamp") with a different itinerary. Packed into five days were 22 seminars and even time for play, including an evening of sightseeing around the monuments.

"The whole week was a high point," she said. Most memorable was the chance to meet and know students from other parts of the country.

"The culture shock was intense," she said. "They spoke a different slang from Minnesota and Ohio."

It was, she confessed, her first time away from California.

Ms. Morris, who labels herself a non-partisan, said the most enlightening experience came from meeting with her representatives from both sides of the political fence. While she said Panetta impressed her with his sincerity and knowledge, she said Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-California, disappointed her by not showing up for their meeting and sending aides who were not well-informed.

"Hayakawa stood us up, then sent his aides who told us the senator tap dances," Ms. Morris frowned. "How relevant is that to a political career?"

Ms. Morris recalled a breakfast meeting where Panetta gave a talk followed by a question-and-answer period.

"He knew the answers," she said. "He knew what he wanted and just how to do it."

Panetta said the biggest danger in politics today is being separated from constituents, she added.

Would she contact him in the future to express her feelings about an issue?

"Not only will I contact him, but I'll also know how," she replied.

The day she sat in on a congressional session, Ms. Morris said it appeared nothing was getting done. "We walked in and sat where we were looking down at the floor of Congress," she said. Only one-third of the seats were occupied, and those legislators present seemed to be just milling around, she said.

"You listen and you can hear people trying to pass bills, but it's nothing like in the textbooks," she grinned.

She also sat in on a committee discussing a code of ethics for lawyers, and again she said she did not understand the proceedings. At the end of each day, however, the students collected to discuss what they had seen and a government official or teacher would elaborate.

The seminars also included a meeting with Les Janka, a former deputy to the secretary of defense for Far Eastern, African and South Asian Affairs. The diplomat's talk emphasized that politics was not a spectator sport. Ms. Morris recalled his words: "We have to do it for ourselves. If not,

'All the stuff they feed you in textbooks suddenly becomes real, it takes form.'

other people are going to do it, and they're not going to do it for us, but to us."

The aspects of the trip that most repeatedly impressed Ms. Morris were the insights into Washington as a city of people, not just bureaucrats.

A walking tour one day took the students through frigid weather on a tour of the capital that brought them near the "bad side of town," the black ghetto, she said.

From her hotel room, Ms. Morris recalled that she could see the Capitol. It was a vision that broadened her view of the world and her country and it is one that she hopes someday to return to.

"It's a lot more human than I thought," she said.

A STAND ON COLOR FOR CARMEL STREETS

The question is up for decision as to the color of streets in the downtown section, apart from Ocean Avenue, Dolores and San Carlos streets. It is of direct interest to everybody in Carmel. It has a bearing upon the town's future. And it is the first time in our paving program that there has been the ghost of a chance that, in the decision, the matter of beauty might be considered.

It would be wise for those of us who are standing for a distinctive and beautiful Carmel to be at the next meeting of the Council, and show our interest in this paving problem. The backing we can give the members favorable to something other than the dirty white streets that offend the eye, will prove that they are not alone in the battle for beauty. Let this be a test of the popularity of the Carmel ideal.

Brunn's request for cabin does another lap around the board

By JOANNE HODGEN

CITY COUNCILMAN Howard Brunn's quest for a caretaker's cabin behind his home has been continued for the second time by the Carmel Planning Commission.

The commission reviewed his application for a use permit to allow servants' quarters with or without a kitchen during its Board of Adjustments session Wednesday, Dec. 17.

Brunn's home, on the east side of Junipero between Rio Road and Ridgewood, is in the annexed residential district of Carmel. Planning decisions are based on the Monterey County code in effect when the area was annexed to Carmel.

The Land Use Committee, Donald Davidson, John Logan and James Wright, recommended that the use permit be denied. Among the reasons cited for denial was that Brunn did not submit information on his need for servants' quarters.

A committee report stated that a review of other property in the neighborhood revealed that seven have second dwelling units used primarily as rental units.

The committee also noted that a second unit would create the need for additional parking.

In his presentation to the commission, Brunn said he wants the 325-square-foot unit for his five children when they visit.

Brunn's house has one-story, 804 square feet and a garage of 276 square feet. He is building an addition to the house of 690 square feet that will include a master bedroom and bath.

He said, "This is the house I'm going to live in. This house will not be rented."

Brunn said his son-in-law, Jay Killen, designed the guest cottage to avoid disturbing trees on the property. Though it would be easier to make a U-shaped addition to the house, Brunn said he wanted to save the trees.

In referring to the commission's objections to a kitchen, he said he wanted a small refrigerator with a stove top for light meals.

Brunn estimated that because of the setback, there is room for four or five cars to park. But Planning Director Bob Griggs told Brunn that a 20-foot setback requirement must be observed, leaving only 7½ feet for parking.

Planning Commission Chairman Robert Stephenson also noted that the survey of Brunn's property states the lot is 120 by 60 feet, while the land use report says it is 110 by 60.

Brunn said he believed the additional 10 feet were for utilities.

However, Logan said the problem was the second kitchen. "I would like to ask for one of the things we did not find. What is the justification for a second kitchen?" he asked.

Brunn explained that he did not intend to have a servant. "The second kitchen would be for whoever is in there," he said.

Logan responded, "We saw no latitude at all. We have a second kitchen for a servant or no second kitchen."

Davidson said, "The house is large enough to qualify to have a guest house."

"Though we want to have legislation that would allow food preparation areas... we've approved guest houses that do not include them."

However, Commissioner Arthur Mertens observed that the agenda stated that Brunn was applying for a permit for a unit with or without a kitchen.

Brunn told the commissioners a permit without a kitchen would be fine.

"At the time we discussed this, my concern was a second kitchen," Logan said. "If he can provide parking I might look at it more favorably."

He then told Brunn he could convert the application by changing the words caretaker cottage to guest house.

The commissioners voted 7-0 to continue the application to the next meeting, Jan. 21.

DURING the Board of Adjustments session, the commission also voted 7-0 to deny a use permit to Barbara Snyder for a bar sink in a new studio room at her home on the southwest corner of Monterey and Second.

The Land Use Committee report noted that the studio room "could easily be adapted to a second rental dwelling and the area proposed for the sink could easily be used for a second food preparation area."

Mistletoe and pine mix just fine

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

A drive through the streets of the village leaves no doubt in the mind that Christmas has arrived. Gaily decorated Christmas trees twinkle from picture-windows and the aromas of turkey, stuffing and pumpkin pie waft through the pines. The feeling is one of happiness and good cheer.

Here's hoping that Santa was as nice to you as you've been to me these past six months. Without your help there could have been no Pine Whispers column — so, thank you for sharing a bit of your life with all of us and may 1981 be your best year ever!

CHRISTMAS BRUNCH

Sherri Waldman decided that a celebration was long overdue — so Dec. 14 she welcomed friends to an unforgettable Christmas brunch.

The affair was also to celebrate her move into her new home — and to acknowledge the success of her Agape (means love)

Residential Care Home of Carmel which opened last February. And what a gala it was! The first guest arrived at 10 a.m. and the last one went home in a cab at 7 p.m.

Christmas music echoed through the house and glowing fires burned in both the living room and family room fireplaces. Christmas trees and decorations of pine boughs, holly, mistletoe and burning candles were placed throughout the house.

There was no lack of the bubbly as guests were served champagne, red and white wine and Tom and Jerries, which were served in Santa Claus cups made by Sherri.

Hostess Sherri welcomed her guests in a long, pale pink gown trimmed in paler pink satin. Her upswept hair-do was highlighted with pink ribbons.

Also causing a bit of high blood pressure for the men was Barbara Martin — who looked like a young Rita Hayworth with her flaming red hair, satin turquoise pants and spiffy ivory satin blouse.

But without question the belle of the ball was 87-year-young Helen Small, who told stories of the 1906 earthquake in San Francisco — and also danced with every gent at the party.

Helping Sherri with the cooking chores for the past week were Connie Winners, Eloise Helm (well-known psychic and astrologer), Tammy Kamp and Sherri's two sons, Brent and Craig.

Guests feasted on an array of homemade delicacies including blintzes, quiches, cheese puffs, spinach casserole, gelatin molds, egg and cheese casserole, fresh fruits, cheeses, a special casserole of hashbrowns and scalloped potatoes (which had everyone begging for the recipe) and dessert of tiny pecan pies and a variety of homemade cookies.

One guest who was caught absolutely guzzling champagne was Sassy Daisy — a no-bigger-than-a-mouse Yorkshire terrier. When her mistress, Margaret Chase Behrend, was looking the other way, tiny Daisy dived into the glass and emerged a bit tipsy.

Later in the evening, Carlos Brizzolara played his guitar and everyone joined in a sing-along of old Italian songs as well as Christmas carols. Then it was dance time to the Urban Cowboy soundtrack.

Was it a good party? Silly question!

GRACE KELEHER AND HARP

The withdrawal window at local banks seems to be everyone's favorite spot this time of year.

Recession or no — the holiday will continue, and one person who is making things a bit more pleasant is Grace Keleher, lending officer at the Monterey Savings and Loan Association in Carmel.

Grace, who has an interesting background as a harpist, decided that a little music was in order — so when there are no customers at her window she entertains customers by playing her Lyon-Healy orchestra-size harp. The gilded, carved instrument is beautiful to look at — but when Grace sits down to play Christmas carols, the beauty becomes sweet music.

Hostess Sherri Waldman and son Brent prepare brunch.

Chatting fireside are Josephine Bennett of the Agape Residential Care Home (left) and Billie Poteet of Carmel.

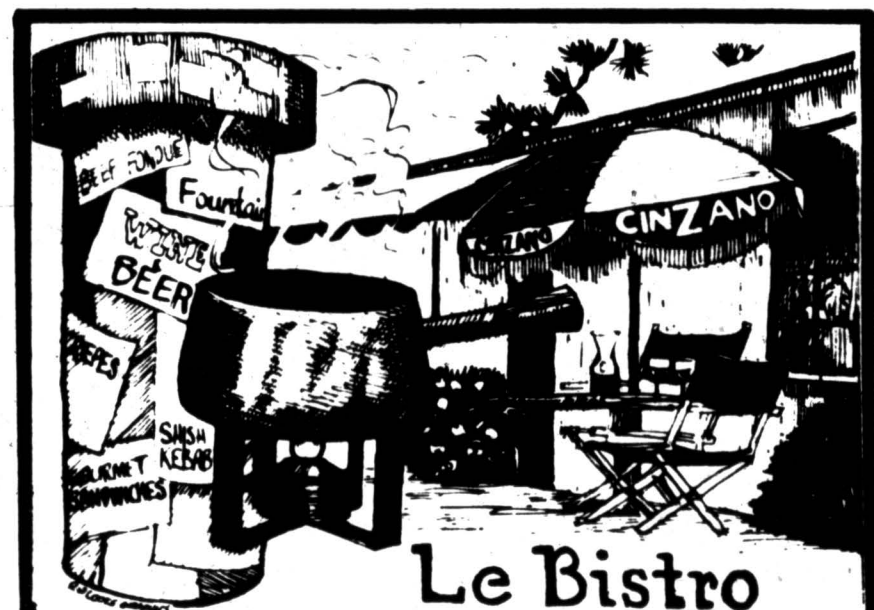

Customers who also play the harp frequently ask Grace if they can have a turn while waiting to do their banking. One customer who entertained was Carmelite William Faulkner, who plays a Mexican folk harp. Bill played Latin tunes with his fingernails, while Grace used her finger-pads.

Grace, who has lived in the area for four years, studied at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and also at UCLA with Mildred Dilling — the woman who taught Harpo Marx. She also played with the Fresno Philharmonic Orchestra for five years and now plays at the Highlands Inn for special events.

the 250 guests. The cocktail hour preceded a sit-down dinner of ham with all the trimmings, including homemade fruitcake.

Gen. Everett "Brick" Halstrom (Army, retired) and Gen. William Millington (Marines, retired) were having a grand old time as were Robert and June Sheppard. Bob recently retired as president of Allstate Insurance.

Interesting stories always make the rounds at social gatherings, and one with a bit of wet humor at this affair was about Pamela Chin's Mercedes. Seems that Pamela had left the car at the Quail Lodge Service Station — and some thrill-seeker took the car and drove it into the small lake in front of the sixth tee at the club. Howard Hawkins finally had to call a tow truck to remove it. They haven't found the culprit yet, but I imagine that Pamela would like to get her hands on him.

Those attending the party included Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Whither, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Shapiro, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Marotta, Mr. and Mrs. Max Landphere, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Warner Lee and young Bobby Clappett, the new sensation on the professional golf tour.

VOLUNTEERS

Mrs. Thomas Hardy held a luncheon at her Carmel home Dec. 17 honoring the 1980 board members of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services.

Among those present were Mrs. William Balestri, recording secretary; Mrs. George Macy, membership chairman, and Mrs. J.S. Power and Mrs. S.Y. Cutler, past presidents.

Mrs. Hardy has been president of MPVS since the spring of 1978.

Sales at the group's Thrift Shop, 755 Broadway in Seaside, have reportedly increased 25 percent under her direction. Profits are donated to local charities.

GO FLY A KITE

High hopes and great expectations!

That's what New Year's Day is all about — and according to John and Nancy Livingstone, the best way to get that soaring feeling is to hit the beach and fly a kite.

"We wanted to spend the day outdoors and get that 'up' feeling," said Nancy. "So last year we packed a late breakfast and invited friends to join us on the beach at the foot of 13th."

Joining in the first "Fly Your New Year's Kite" was the Livingstones' daughter and son-in-law, Jim and Suzanne Summers, and their daughter, Jennifer; Russell and Betty Marie Tripp and their children, Gavin, Stuart and daughter Monty; Norman and Noreen Rial and their little son, Norman Alison, and Joan and Pete Hopkins and their daughter, Pam.

"The idea is to have fun and enjoy the day — not compete," said Nancy. "It's really a great feeling to see your kite sailing way up there. We're hoping that a lot more people will join us this year and perhaps make it an annual affair."

Some interesting suggestions from Nancy were: Make your own kite, bring a camera, don't forget the kids — and the chow.

Ruling is against Rancho Canada

By STEVE HELLMAN

OPPONENTS of the planned Rancho Canada Lodge in Carmel Valley received an extra legal Christmas present last week with a court decision that could undo approval of the beleaguered project.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver ruled in a lawsuit filed by the City of Carmel that the use permit approved for the 175-room lodge must be set aside. He ordered the county Board of Supervisors to reconsider its approval of the use permit in light of the county's most restrictive land-use policies for the project site near the mouth of Carmel Valley.

While Silver's decision was based on a contract between the state and county and while it placed the lodge approval in doubt, it also left open the possibility that the supervisors could reaffirm their approval for the lodge without forcing the issue back into the courts.

The lodge developer and the county counsel's office both indicated this week that they would not appeal the judge's decision.

The use permit will be reconsidered by the new Board of Supervisors sometime after Jan. 1, and most likely during its deliberations over the new Carmel Valley Master Plan. Silver's decision did not say which of the county's several plans covering the site is the most restrictive, leaving the supervisors the option of settling the question in its final adoption of the Master Plan.

The political make-up of the board with two new members will therefore be a key factor in the outcome of Silver's decision and the fate of Rancho Canada Lodge.

The judge's decision left open enough leeway that both sides in the battle hailed it as a victory.

DEPUTY COUNTY COUNSEL Jose Ramos said it could strengthen the county's position.

He insisted that Silver's ruling did not invalidate the use permit, but simply remanded it back to the supervisors for further findings.

The basis for Silver's decision, Ramos noted, was the contract between the county and the state Office of Planning and Research for a year extension for the county to correct its deficient General Plan. Among the conditions of the extension, which serves as the major planning guideline during the revision, the county is required if there is a conflict between plans covering the project site to use the most restrictive plan.

"I think the county can show that it did adhere (to the OPR extension)," Ramos said.

"The most restrictive land-use designation may permit the hotel," he said. Ramos said the county would not appeal the decision.

Nick Lombardo, president of the company planning the lodge, said there was nothing to appeal in Silver's decision.

Asked how he will approach the supervisors during their reconsideration of the use permit, Lombardo said only, "We'll have to look at it (Silver's decision) in depth."

Alexander Henson, representing the City of Carmel, said the impact of the decision will most likely become fully felt during deliberations on the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

He acknowledged that Silver has simply asked the supervisors to reconsider the fact that the use permit must be consistent with the county's General Plan, and that there are a variety of General Plans that could be applied to the site.

The Monterey Peninsula Area Plan is the most restrictive, Henson insisted, and would therefore be the one that the supervisors should apply; it designates the site for residential and open space use.

While Henson noted that residential designation is not considered as restrictive as commercial, for example, the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan could still be considered the most restrictive in this case because it does not designate the site for a lodge or visitor-serving facility.

"The (Monterey Peninsula Area) plan says lodges can be located only in certain areas, and it names those areas, including Quail Lodge, but not Rancho Canada," Henson said.

To comply with its contract with the OPR and the judge's decision, Henson said the county will either have to amend the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan or use the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Henson said he doubted that Lombardo will ask or that the county will try to amend the area plan, since it would require public hearings and a controversial amendment to an existing plan.

Lombardo could be expected, Henson said, to simply wait until the new board deliberates over the Master Plan and push for it to approve the plan.

The present board voted 3-2 to approve the lodge permit. Supervisor Sam Farr, who voted against it, will be replaced by William Peters of Carmel Valley, who also voted against it as a member of the county Planning Commission. Supervisor Kenneth Blohm voted for the lodge, but he is being replaced by Marc Del Piero of Watsonville, who also voted against it as a planning commissioner.

Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck and Chairman Michal Moore voted for it. Supervisor Dusan Petrovic voted against. If Del Piero and Peters retain their positions against the project, any key vote on it could go 3-2 against the lodge.

"Judge Silver gave Carmel Valley a nice Christmas present," Henson said.

The judge's decision gave Henson his second major victory in land-use litigation covering Carmel Valley. Henson also represented the City of Carmel and Virginia Merz in their lawsuit that resulted in a court order requiring the county to prepare an Environmental Impact Report for the Carmel Valley Master Plan. Silver was also the judge in that case.

Tips given on saving energy for heat

Homeowners haven't cornered the market on efficient heating techniques. Renters can apply some of them this winter, too.

"Renters can avoid unnecessary costs on their energy bills," said Joe Cowan, Pacific Gas and Electric Co. district manager.

Cowan specifically suggested that renters:

- Set heating thermostats to the lowest comfortable setting. Heating energy use can be cut by as much as five percent for each degree a thermostat is lowered each day, Cowan said.

- Weatherstrip doors and windows. Apartment managers or landlords may supply the materials.

- Clean or replace furnace filters periodically in units that have their own heating systems. Apartment managers or landlords may provide replacement filters.

- Open drapes or window shades on sunny days and let the sunshine in. Close drapes or shades at night and on cloudy days.

- Keep the fireplace damper closed when there's no fire.

Jennifer Suzanne Levy

It's a girl!

Bringing happiness to the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Levy is baby Jennifer Suzanne, who was born at Community Hospital at 12:53 a.m. Dec. 4.

Jennifer weighed 6 pounds, 8 ounces at birth and was 20 inches long. According to her mother, she has blue eyes and sandy hair, just like her dad.

Her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Bob Levy of Los Angeles. Her maternal grandparents are Victor Campbell of Huntington Beach and Mary Jane Campbell of Troutville, Pa.

Jennifer's father is a physician and her mother is a nurse, so it's not surprising that this little girl went home from the hospital when she was only one day old.

She is the first child for the couple, so her welcoming-home committee included her parents, grandma Mary Jane, who is visiting to help out — and three dogs, two cats, three birds and a tank full of fish.

When not busy with patients in his Carmel office, Jennifer's dad enjoys helping with her care and is getting straight A's in diaper changing and floor walking.

Welcome to the world, Jennifer!

Christopher James Cook

Very much in charge of things at the Carmel home of James and Victoria Cook is young Christopher James, who greeted the world at Community Hospital at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 5.

Master Cook weighed in at 7 pounds, 11 ounces, and was 19½ inches long. His proud father said he has brown hair, blue eyes and a slight Pennsylvania accent.

The baby's paternal grandfather is Charles R. Cook of Pennsylvania. His maternal grandmother is Mrs. Dusolina Torcolini, also of Pennsylvania.

Overjoyed with the new arrival was big brother, Jonathan, 4, who "we caught tromping up the hall with him in his arms," said father Jim.

And when asked what they call the newcomer, big Jim replied: "Oh, we call him 'crying' and 'please-let-us-sleep tonight.'"

When asked if he helped out with such things as floor-walking, diaper changing and night duty, the new father replied: "None of the above!" — but in the next breath he admitted that he's pretty good at all those chores.

Christopher was born via natural childbirth, so dad was right there to welcome him. Dad's first words when told he had a son? "Another one!"

Needless to say, you're very much loved, Christopher!

Explorer post is rechartered

Explorer Post 3 of Carmel has been rechartered for its second year as a High Adventure Post with eight members, five of whom are Eagle Scouts.

Eagle Scouts are Ross Anderson, Van Crego, Daniel Hu, Jerry Hu and Robert Ryu. Other members are Richard Han, Vlad Lewis and Addison Phillips.

Explorer Post 3 is sponsored by the Carmel Kiwanis Club and meets on the first Thursday of each month at Sunset Center.

SOCCER LETTER

Jennifer S. Beck of Carmel was awarded a varsity letter by Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, for her participation on the women's soccer team.

HIKE FOR SCOUTS

Scouts from Carmel's Explorer Post 3 and Boy Scout Troop 3 took a backpacking hike in the Ventana Wilderness of Los Padres National Forest Dec. 13-14.

Scouts participating included Ross Anderson, Van Crego, Daniel Hu, Jerry Hu, Addison Phillips, Chris Bowe, Clifton Bonner, Chris Tolles, Daniel McLean and Ben Godfrey. Scoutmaster Art Crego and William Godfrey accompanied the Scouts.

SCULPTURE AWARD

Craig McLean of Carmel has received a cash award for sculpture in the 16th Annual Student Art Exhibition at the University of the Pacific in Stockton.

Scout party

Fifteen Scouts and prospective members from Carmel's Boy Scout Troop 3 enjoyed an old-fashioned Christmas party with Christmas carols and refreshments at the James B. Lindgren home in Pebble Beach Dec. 17.

Scouts attending were Clifton Bonner, Van Crego, Jeffrey Fenton, Benjamin Godfrey, John Hardin, Siegfried Lackner, Conrad Lindgren, Daniel McLean, Addison Phillips, Chris Tolles, Tim Williams and Chris Bowe.

Assistant Scoutmaster Ron Williams and William Godfrey were honored for their contributions to Troop 3.

"When you have a complete dinner at my place, you get your money's worth."

"Tonight, try a thick, juicy U.S.D.A. choice top sirloin with a hot, buttery baked potato loaded with all the sour cream you like, and our special cheese toast. You know what this would cost you at the supermarket these days! At our place it's only $4.69. If you like, you can add our famous "All You Can Eat" salad bar. For only $1.29 it's one of the finest dining values in Monterey. Then think about this: the time and trouble it takes for the shopping, the cooking, the clean-up, and of course, the leftovers. When you add it all up, the answer is to have dinner at the Sizzler!"

LOCAL COASTAL PROGRAM

Unincorporated area's battle has a new front

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE BATTLE CLOUD swirling over the draft Local Coastal Program for the Carmel unincorporated area moved to Salinas last week as the controversial document was handed to the Monterey County Planning Commission.

The commissioners were briefed on the status of the draft plan and the positions of the many sides fighting for a toe-hold in it to determine the fate of the Carmel Highlands and surrounding vistas.

The county Planning Department introduced the 95-page, salmon-colored draft LCP. Planner Susan Hilinski noted the areas the county staff considers appropriate for development, the densities, locations of future visitor-serving facilities and, among other key issues, the restrictions it proposes on development of the Odello land.

The draft policies and land-use restrictions proposed by the county staff are more stringent than those recommended so far by the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) to the LCP.

The CAC worked more than a year on its version of the LCP, but by last week had not completed its recommendations on the central land-use segment.

CAC Chairman Harold Seyferth expressed fears that the commission would proceed with adopting the LCP before the CAC had forwarded its complete version.

THE 13-MEMBER CAC had failed by last week to resolve its key land-use policies because it has been openly divided between large landowners and developer representatives on the one hand and persistent conservation forces on the other.

Although still divided on some major points, the CAC has consistently proposed less stringent restrictions on density and areas of development.

Issues still unresolved between the CAC and the county staff are whether the Odello land at the mouth of Carmel Valley should be limited to residential development only, or include commercial and visitor-serving facilities; the overall zoning densities, and the number of lodges to be allowed on Point Lobos Ranch.

The commission assured that it would continue discussion of the draft LCP to its Jan. 28 meeting, allowing time for the CAC to present its full case.

The only other comments from the commission were a call for clarifying whether the state-mandated LCP will dominate the county General Plan, and a forceful warning from one veteran commissioner who objected to the extent of land-use restrictions proposed by the county staff.

Commissioner William Peters questioned whether development on the Odellos' 134 acres east of Highway 1 will ultimately be governed by the proposed Carmel Valley Master

'The property owner has to get something for his money.'

Plan — to be incorporated in the county General Plan — or by the LCP.

Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos declared that in any case where a conflict in zoning or land-use policy occurs between state and county law, the former is the final arbitrator.

Once the LCP is approved by the county and then the Regional and State coastal commissions, it will be used by the county as the guideline for development in the coastal area around Carmel. The permit process that is now run by the state commissions will be returned wholly to the county.

But as Ramos noted, the state-mandated LCP must overrule the county's Master Plan for Carmel Valley any time they conflict.

Peters' question sparked comment from Planning Director Ed DeMars, frustrated by the state's power over the county in the LCP process.

He said, "One of the frustrations is that we clearly have a mandate under the state Coastal Act. It's not just a matter of us getting together and saying what we want to do."

"We have to meet state guidelines to have a certifiable plan and to get the permit procedure back to the county," DeMars said.

"We're not free agents."

Commissioner Peter Cailotto indicated just how the county might operate with the final LCP in candid comments he made about the restrictions on development east of Highway 1.

Cailotto, who has been on the commission 26 years, said it was always the county's policy that the west side of Highway 1, the ocean-view side, had to be protected at all costs.

"I don't think the restrictions have to be as great on the east side," he said.

"We have to allow some development rights. The property owner has to get something for his money. We just can't wipe things out."

Cailotto called for a relaxation of restrictions in areas already developed on the east side of the highway.

SEVERAL LANDOWNER representatives told the commission they will present extensive written positions against the county staff's proposed restrictions.

More than one lawyer warned of a protracted battle over the limits on building densities.

Plan could curtail development at Valley mouth

By JOANNE HODGEN

A PORTION of the Local Coastal Program that may curtail development of the Odello property at the mouth of Carmel Valley has been approved by the LCP Citizens Advisory Committee for the Carmel unincorporated area.

The committee reviewed part of the LCP land use and development segment and visual resource phase when it met Monday, Dec. 15. Though the completed LCP draft report has been presented to the Planning Commission, the CAC will continue to meet. The county planners will forward the advisory group's recommendations to the commission.

Most of the LCP for unincorporated Carmel and Carmel Highlands has been endorsed by the CAC. However, the controversial land use and development segment was approved by the CAC only in philosophy.

The specific policies of the land-use plan state that private development of the eastern part of the Odello land will be limited to low-density residential development at one unit per 2.5 acres.

The Odellos want to build 97 condominiums, a 200-unit hotel and farmers' market on the 134 acres of agricultural land south of Carmel River and east of Highway 1.

The Odello land lies in the Carmel River 100-year floodplain, which encompasses the Lower Valley.

In the LCP, county planners have included a requirement that land-use decisions be postponed until a flood management survey of the Lower Valley is completed.

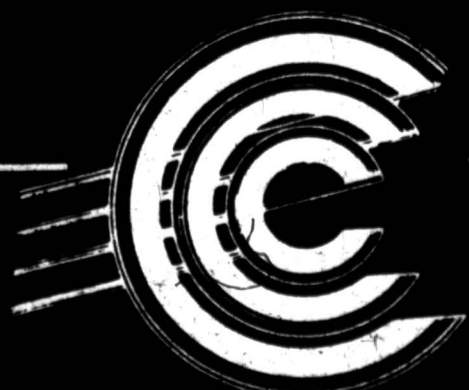

One planner had said that piecemeal flood protection endangered property and aggravated existing problems.

However, Bruna Odello told the committee Dec. 15 she

Odellos want their land developed

objected to the stringent development restrictions placed on the family property.

The committee previously endorsed a development concept that was a mix of residential and commercial on the Odello property.

Susan Hilinski, Carmel area project planner for the county, told the committee that the policy change was a staff decision.

Because the area just north of the Carmel River is already heavily developed and Highway 1 congested, she said, "We could not justify two major commercial facilities."

"We realized after the fact that the (proposed) Carmel Valley Master Plan was to allow only residential construction."

Miss Hilinski said the Master Plan specifically earmarked areas for commercial development and the "Odello land is not one of those."

Miss Odello and Sabastian Bordonaro, architect for the proposed project, emphatically stated that was not true.

(The Carmel Valley Master plan allows for residential development of the Odello property. While it does not designate the property for commercial development, it leaves open the possibility that could be permitted. The Odello property is included in the Lower Valley Area of Development Concentration (ADC), where all future visitor accommodations and commercial developments will be allowed in the Lower Valley.)

According to the LCP land-use proposals, "Other than reasonable expansion of existing visitor-serving facilities and the development of a new facility on Point Lobos Ranch, no additional inns or motels are recommended for the Carmel segment."

If a permit were granted for development on the Odello land, access would be provided by a bridge over Carmel River and road linking the Odello land to Carmel Valley Road. Direct access would not be permitted from Highway 1.

RICHARD BARRETT, a member of the advisory committee, said he understood that the eastern part of the Odello land would be served by that road.

Miss Hilinski said she was unsure whether that could legally be required.

Miss Odello observed, "What I find so difficult to understand is Highway 1 not being able to sustain our development."

"Much has been said about the pressures and highway limitations. I don't understand why our commercial facilities are opposed when still the beat goes on."

Harold Seyferth, chairman of the committee, said that because the CAC previously endorsed a development mix of residential and commercial, the Planning Commission "should have that wording in reference to this particular property."

The CAC also disputed the county Planning Department's description of Mission Ranch behind the Carmel Mission Basilica on Rio Road as a visitor-serving facility.

The LCP lists the Mission Ranch Cottage Motel as one of five motels or inns within the planning area providing 207 units. Though expansion of some lodges has been proposed, including the Carmel River Inn and Highlands Inn, Mission Ranch has not made a formal proposal for expansion. Mission Ranch changed ownership in 1979.

Many residents surrounding Mission Ranch object to it being in a residential area and to noise and traffic from its dance hall.

Built in 1937, Mission Ranch is designated as a non-conforming use. It is permitted under the grandfather clause that allows existing establishments to continue operation despite a change in zoning laws.

Barrett said the CAC Land Use Committee noted that Mission Ranch and the Hodges property, now used as a corporation yard by the City of Carmel, "should be residential to keep in character with nearby zoning."

He said the dance hall usage is legally questionable because of its disturbances in the residential area.

He told the county planners that the residents spent "an awful lot of time on this (CAC recommendations). The work isn't reflective of the work in the plan. We urge you to incorporate this into your plan."

Barrett said the LCP encourages visitor-serving facilities.

"The question is, is Mission Ranch lawfully functioning in all aspects?" Barrett asked.

Miss Hilinski remarked, "What do you suggest? Tear it down?"

Because the dance hall is not a visitor-serving facility, she suggested that the issue be reviewed if the owners apply for an expansion permit.

Elizabeth Bell of the Mission Fields area said schools, the Carmel Mission and Mission Ranch contribute to the congestion of the area. "That area needs less use. This committee should state it needs less use," she said.

Mayor Barney Laiolo told the committee he supported the Mission Ranch operation.

Laiolo observed that the owners are upgrading the facilities.

THE COMMITTEE also discussed a possible location for the proposed Point Lobos Ranch development.

The development may include visitor accommodations, horseback riding, hiking trails and picnic areas.

The LCP states that the flatlands area extends from the east side of Highway 1 about 2,500 feet inland to an elevation of 400 feet. The LCP indicates that the flatlands area would be suitable for the project.

It also offers an alternative site on the forested ridge of Huckleberry Hill in the "intermediate terrain zone." That area lies immediately east of the flatlands rising from an elevation of 400 feet to 1,000 feet.

Huckleberry Hill, according to the LCP, is visibly prominent from Highway 1 and other public use areas. That factor "is a serious constraint to any development located here," the LCP said.

Barrett said that in the committee's judgment, structures can be effectively hidden in the trees along the ridge. "The tenor of this (the LCP) is a negative one and implies that it can't be," he said.

The CAC members agreed that the intermediate terrain would be the preferred location because the project can be hidden from view.

The CAC approved the visual resources portion of the LCP with minor changes.

The purpose of the segment is to protect the scenic resources of the Carmel area. All future development within the viewshed, it states, must harmonize and be subordinate to the natural scenic character of the area. All land use and development must conform to the viewshed policy of minimum visibility, according to the LCP.

Among the actions proposed to protect the visual resources of the Carmel area, county planners recommend that a management plan for the Scenic Road corridor be prepared.

The survey would be undertaken by the county and state Department of Parks and Recreation in cooperation with the City of Carmel and Carmel Point community.

The LCP states that the management plan should address the following items:

- Identification of degraded bluff areas requiring restoration and protection from recreational use.
- Development of measures for restoring and managing the bluff area.
- Identification of degraded or failing sections of Scenic Road and establishment of design criteria for road repairs.
- Improvement of designated accessways.

The LCP also notes that the county height ordinance for homes in the Carmel Point area should be revised to limit maximum height of new structures along Scenic Road to the average height of existing structures on either side. That means if a house on one side of a parcel is 14 feet and the house on the other side 20 feet, the maximum height of the proposed home would be 17 feet.

The administration and implementation phase of the LCP that focuses on the future application of the plan was opposed by the CAC members. They objected to the section being included in the LCP without their knowledge.

Bill Farrell, LCP project planner, said the phase is a standardized form that has been included in other local LCPs.

The CAC objected to a recommendation that adjacent substandard size lots held by the same owner merge. That would be applied in areas where individual legal lots of record would harm the "existing natural uses."

Seyferth asked that the implementation phase be deleted because the "strength of this section is so awesome."

Carl Hooper, an engineer, warned the CAC that the Planning Commission could adopt the Carmel area LCP before its comments on the implementation phase were heard.

Miss Hilinski said, "There's plenty of time to get your comments together."

The CAC will meet again at the beginning of January.

After public hearings with the county Planning Commission and supervisors, the LCP will be reviewed by the Regional Coastal Commission.

Final approval comes from the California Coastal Commission, at which time the LCP will serve as the county's guideline for land use, public access and conservation decisions in the unincorporated Carmel area and Carmel Highlands.

A tentative deadline of July 1 has been set by the state for final certification.

LCP inconsistency

Carl Hooper of Bestor Engineers said he represented 11 clients, among them Arthur Oppenheimer, who owns 920 acres in the LCP area, and Dr. Wesley Wright, who owns 640 acres.

The draft LCP would allow 480 new housing units to be added to the existing 2,290 units in the area, Hooper noted. Adding that there are already 290 vacant lots, he concluded that only 190 new lots could be created under the draft plan.

"We're looking at extremely low densities," Hooper said, that would be especially unfair to his clients.

The 80-acre minimum parcel size proposed for most of the undeveloped area covered by the plan would not allow any additional parcels on Wright's property, Hooper lamented. He suggested that a plateau on Wright's land could be developed with 20-acre parcels with no significant impact on the view and roads.

SABASTIAN BORDONARO, representing the Odello family, criticized what he said was a last-minute shift in the county staff's recommendations for his clients' 134 acres.

He noted that the CAC has recommended that residential as well as commercial and visitor-serving uses be allowed on the far eastern end of the Odello land. The county staff, he said, changed its position to limit development to residential only with a one- to 2½-acre density.

'One of the frustrations is that we clearly have a mandate under the state Coastal Act.'

The low density recommendation did not reflect the CAC's position, Bordonaro said.

He urged that the commission be aware of the inconsistencies and differences between the CAC and county staff recommendations.

William Stoffers, former county counsel, said he represented several property owners in the Mission Fields area, including Betty Bell. He called the LCP a "monumental work" in land planning, and cautioned that it would be premature for the commission to even discuss it before the CAC and county staff had ironed out their differences.

Commission Chairman Joe Sullivan assured that the action on the LCP would be delayed into January to allow the CAC time to present its full version.

Her business has substitute mothers for hire

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

FEW THINGS are considered as precious as a mother's love.

Perhaps that's why one of the most brutal blows that life can deliver, especially to a young, growing family, is the loss of the mother.

One person who took it upon herself to do something about that is Alice B. Uehling of Carmel, whose initials make the name that children call her—Abu.

Widowed in her 40s, Mrs. Uehling desperately needed a new purpose in life and soon found it.

"When my husband died I felt as if half of me had been cut away," she said. "I'd always thought I was independent, and I couldn't believe what devastation it was trying to get along without him. I knew that if I was going to survive I would have to build a new life."

'She also wipes runny noses, bandages scraped knees, gives abundant love and is never short of kisses.'

MRS. UEHLING was living in Virginia then, and a young friend of hers had just lost his wife and was struggling to care for his two small children. Mrs. Uehling decided to help by being a substitute mother in his home. It was a role that made her feel needed and helped her through a difficult time in her life.

In the next eight years Mrs. Uehling was a surrogate mother in five other households, filling their need for a loving mother.

In 1970 she bought a home in Carmel, but had only lived in it a few months when she received a call from U.S. Rep. Hamilton Fish of Millbrook, N.Y. asking her to come take care of his children.

"His wife had been killed by a drunken driver and he was left with four children," said Mrs. Uehling. "The two older ones were away to school so I took care of the two younger ones who were still at home."

When Fish remarried a year later, Mrs. Uehling received many requests for her services as a substitute mother.

"I was just one woman so I couldn't handle all the requests," said Mrs. Uehling. "I decided it was time to spark other women into the field, so I opened an office in my home and recruited women to become substitute mothers."

During the first year, Mrs. Uehling recruited 19 women. She also found the perfect name for her new business — Mothers-in-Deed.

Mrs. Uehling said the four ingredients necessary for success as a surrogate mother are genuine love of children, wise discipline, adaptability and consistency. She said discipline applied with good humor and a firm hand is essential.

"This was the pattern I followed in raising my own three sons and it worked very well," she said.

Mrs. Uehling is quick to point out that the job of a surrogate mother is not that of a domestic.

"She is not a housekeeper, nurse or governess, but a mother," said Mrs. Uehling. "She cares for the children, prepares the meals, tidies the house and is available to help the children with homework or chauffeur them to such things as dance classes, tennis lessons or to the dentist's office. She also wipes runny noses, bandages scraped knees, gives abundant love and is never short of kisses."

Mrs. Uehling said that many of the women who apply to her to work as surrogate mothers are wealthy widows or retired career women with grown children. Many have college degrees, and the idea of working in someone else's home never occurred to them until they met or heard of Mrs. Uehling.

MOST of the women Mrs. Uehling places are 40 to 65, but she has had them as young as 17 and as old as 81.

"It depends entirely on the individual person," said Mrs. Uehling, adding that she had a sprightly 81-year-old great-grandmother who was a great success until she retired a couple of years ago. "The things about which I am firm are that all my mothers must be responsible and dedicated and that they must truly love children," Mrs. Uehling said.

MATCHING THE RIGHT woman with the right family is Mrs. Uehling's biggest concern.

"Mother candidates specify their preferences as to age and number of children and geographic region. My clients must wait until I can fit the right mother to the right situation," she said.

Mrs. Uehling is wary of any woman who wants to enter the field in search of a husband. "With this motive the woman's primary interest would no longer be the children, and multiple problems could arise — with the children perhaps suffering neglect at her hands," she said.

Mrs. Uehling said that being a surrogate mother means being a part of the family — not just someone to do the work. "You actually feel like a mother to the children because you care," she said. "You share family meals, picnics, various outings, birthday parties — everything. And as the children begin to return your love they delight in planning happy surprises for you — such as your own birthday party."

Over the years, Mrs. Uehling's business in Virginia continued to grow and Mothers-in-Deed is now a nationwide organization with the main office in Alexandria, VA and branches in San Diego and, most recently, Carmel. The services have also been extended, and qualified persons are placed as managers in motherless or fatherless homes, as well as to parent families where both parents are in offices daily. Some placements last for eight years or more, while others are temporary, for a few days or weeks while parents may be out of town or business or vacation.

Many substitute mothers working for a two-parent family choose to live out of the home. "In a situation such as this we urge the person to be receptive and withdraw from family activities at the proper time," said Mrs. Uehling, "especially if there is another woman in the home."

Mrs. Uehling said that her substitute mothers differ from a natural mother in that they frequently get weekends free. "She also gets a salary (usually $100 to $200 a week plus room and board) and doesn't have to do the hard cleaning."

Mrs. Uehling also explained that except in certain situations, the substitute mother is her own boss. "You do your chores when you feel like it, at least up to a point," she said. "It's important to have dinner on time and be there when the children get home from school, but otherwise you adjust your work load according to your own fancy."

"If you work it properly you always have time for lunching out, enjoying hobbies, sports or writing or painting if you are a creative type person," she said.

MRS. UEHLING'S eyes twinkled when she was asked about romances which have blossomed for her substitute mothers.

"If you're talking about the younger surrogate mothers in a motherless homes and the man of the house making passes — I can only say that 99 times out of 100 the man will not proposition the woman taking care of his children because he might lose her," she said.

"But some romances have materialized in certain situations," she added. "We've had four marriages out of over 500 placements, so the percentage is very small."

Mrs. Uehling is so busy running her organization that she no longer has time to work as a substitute mother. But she said it is the type of work that has a lot to offer the right women.

"The simple truth is that being needed has often done just as much, if not more, for the surrogate mothers than for the family they live and work with," she said.

"They are loved and needed and it's also a good way to supplement an income."

Point Lobos across the water from Carmel Beach.

Point Lobos remembered

The ghost of Christmas past

By VIRGINIA RAY-GEORGHEGAN

DECEMBER BROUGHT a certain stillness to my world in Point Lobos.

On my walk to the school bus stop I would notice the quiet of the woods. The chatter of the squirrels would be almost nil. Birds seemed to have disappeared. The quail that would usually scurry into the underbrush as I passed were gone. The tiny chickadees that jumped from branch to branch were nowhere to be seen.

The quiet was eerie to me. I could hear the swishing of the tree branches in the soft wind. I could hear the ocean quietly hitting the rocks on the beaches. I wondered where everything was. In my mind it was like everything was gone.

I would become frightened and begin to skip and whistle just to hear familiar sounds.
I would hurry to Highway 1 to see the cars and people and I would be reassured that life was going on.

During the day I would forget about the morning thoughts and feelings. There were school lessons, decorations to be made for the Christmas party. I would get caught up in the business of the day. My thoughts would be on what I wanted for Christmas, ways to earn money to buy Christmas presents.

ONE DAY it rained so hard that my father took my sister and me to the bus stop in the car.

In the warmth of the car I conjured up the courage to ask him where everything went when it got cold. I was afraid that all the animals had died and that somehow that is what happened to little girls, too.

My father explained hibernation to me, animals storing food for the winter so they didn't have to go out into the cold — sleeping during the winter, gathering strength for rejuvenation in the spring.

I love the pre-winter months. I seek that quiet of those mornings.

In the natural order of nature I find myself gathering strength for rejuvenation in the spring — 30 years later.

Now THAT'S Carmel!

By Cory Sligar

Humbug visits Carmel

By JOANNE HODGEN

THIS IS NOT a typical Christmas story.

It is a tale about the senseless greed that prevails. It is about opportunism and heartlessness.

And of one little miracle.

It is the story of my move to Carmel. A move that would make Christmas in Carmel possible.

Only four short weeks ago my husband, Terry Eaton, and I found a beautiful Carmel cottage for rent. A house with a fireplace, open-beamed ceilings and a garden complete with a gardener was a dream come true.

As moving day drew near, we packed boxes, boxes and then more boxes with our belongings. Our home in Pacific Grove was only a short hop over Carmel hill so we expected an easy move.

We had plenty of help. My parents, sister, brother-in-law and two young nephews were willing to roll up their sleeves and dig in.

THE DAY BEGAN on the wrong foot.

After rubbing his hands together in glee each time he thought about the new house and moving, Terry woke up Sunday morning with the 24-hour flu. He was useless and he knew it. However, Terry managed to help my father fill the back of his truck with our larger belongings. The bed, dining room table and dresser were loaded onto the pick-up. It was a tight squeeze, but the dresser drawers were added to the back end.

Terry, more concerned about his stomach than the precarious load, returned from the truck to the house. My father, a very sensible man, certain that everything was secure, waited for Terry to go back to the truck so they could drive over the hill to Carmel.

In the meantime, my mother and I had loaded my sister's van to the rooftop and taken off for our new home. We unloaded the boxes, creating a mountain of belongings in the living room and bedroom.

When we returned, we noticed my father and husband parked in front of the police station. We laughed, thinking they had been pulled over for overloading the truck.

We were wrong.

Instead, they had pulled an officer over to report the loss, then theft, of a dresser drawer. On turning from our street onto Lighthouse in Pacific Grove, a dresser drawer had slipped off the truck. Someone had honked, but neither my father nor Terry had seen anything unusual. They continued on their way, then made a right turn three blocks later. Someone else had honked and then they saw it. Another dresser drawer had fallen off.

Terry, realizing that a drawer slipped off earlier, ran back. In a two-minute span, someone had stopped, tossed the first drawer into his car and sped off. A gas station attendant who observed the incident was able to give a description of the car (a brown Ford LTD) to the Pacific Grove police.

IN THAT DRAWER were family

heirlooms.

Terry, being ill, had forgotten to remove a small box with his grandmother's amethyst ring and bracelet, his grandfather's watch and a watch left him by his father.

Though upset by the theft of the jewelry, Terry was most devastated by the loss of his father's watch.

He felt as if someone had twisted a knife in his stomach. The one thing of value he had to remember his father by was gone.

We searched and asked questions of neighbors with no results. The police were helpful, but there was little they could do. The description of the car was their only lead.

At first shocked, then numbed, Terry knew his hands were tied.

"How else can you look at those circumstances except philosophically," we reflected. The pieces were material objects. But Terry said he still had his memories.

All gave their energy to moving and soon our belongings were in Carmel. My mother went home to prepare a birthday dinner for my sister, Mary. Mary stayed with me in Carmel to help arrange furniture and unpack a few boxes.

Terry voted to remain in Carmel and recuperate while I went to my folks' house for dinner. When I returned to our new home in Carmel, a fire was crackling in the fireplace. I knew things were taking a turn for the better.

About 30 minutes later, there was a tremendous crash near our house. Terry peeked outside, but couldn't see anything wrong.

He was wrong.

THE NEXT MORNING, as I fixed breakfast, Terry ran down to the store to pick up a newspaper. When he returned, he noticed that the trunk of his car was up. As he walked closer, it became evident that someone had rear-ended his car. It was demolished.

He was livid. A note was on the car from an observant Carmel policeman who had noticed the smashed car and pieces of glass on the street.

We flew up to the police station to see if anyone had seen the accident. No one had.

But a policeman said the hit-and-run vehicle was probably a four-wheel-drive because of where Terry's car had been struck. I hoped it was a four-wheel-drive vehicle with a crushed front.

We returned home shaken. Asking ourselves how people could be so irresponsible, greedy and heartless. If it happened to them, wouldn't they want the culprits to stop and at least leave a note?

If they were moving, and something fell out of the back of their truck, wouldn't they want someone to turn it into the police?

TERRY AND I walked into the house numb.

He still had to get ready for work. It wasn't easy.

He reached into a dresser drawer for a pair of socks.

He pulled out his father's watch.

Helping others at Christmas

By BARNEY LAIOLO

THIS WEEK'S column will be short as I'm running out of time.

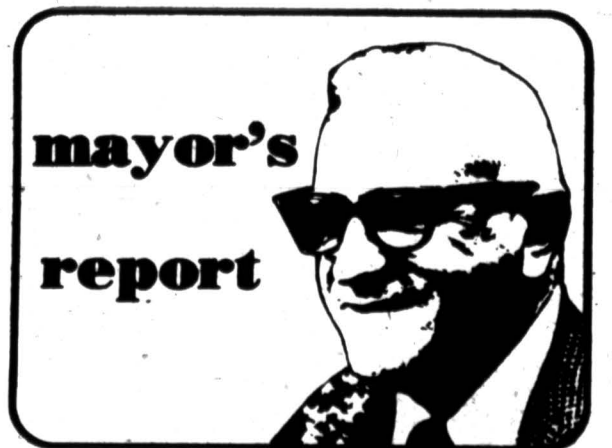

It pleases me no end to have to borrow a 1 1/4-ton truck to haul the great load of clothing, blankets, shoes and many other items over to Maris Warehouse for the shipment to San Francisco Airport to be air lifted to Rome. The shipment will arrive in Rome for Christmas. I can just see the smiles on those faces as the items are distributed. I thank everyone who contributed to this effort. May God bless you all. Thank you again.

CITY HALL is usually closed the day before Christmas each year, but since Christmas is on Thursday this year City Hall will be closed Thursday and Friday.

City Hall will be open, however, the day after New Year's.

I HAVEN'T RECEIVED any response regarding a proposal for the restroom and bus shelter at Devendorf Park.

It would be nice to begin this project to possibly have it completed by summer. Please call 624-2781 at City Hall or call me at home at 624-6011.

WE WILL be accepting names for persons interested in serving on the Forestry Commission.

Phone or drop in at City Hall for an application.

HAVE a most Happy Christmas. Drive safely. Help a friend.

My Christmas smile is shiny,
Mayor Barney

Rare bird

Dear Editor:

The Lewis woodpecker, a rare bird in these parts, has recently been seen in the hills along the Salinas Highway.

The bird is almost as large as a flicker. The wings, both above and below, are black, the face is red, the underparts largely rose. There is a grey collar around the nape of the neck. It prefers an open habitat, with occasional live oaks, between which it flies with steady crow-like wingbeat.

The local Audubon Society hopes to list this woodpecker on the annual Christmas Bird Count, which will take place Dec. 30. On that date 50 to 60 birders will scatter through an area five miles in diameter to check the avifauna by species and number.

Since the Lewis woodpecker has not been listed on the Christmas count for a good many years, its sighting this year would be of particular interest.

Bilingual idea

Dear Editor:

It's time now to suggest some needed changes to our newly-elected governments, county, state and federal.

Let's start by eliminating bilingualism. When our forefathers put together our Constitution, it was agreed that the language of this country would be English, and that to become a citizen of these United States, one had to be able to speak, read and write English.

Inflation formula

Dear Editor:

The Federal Reserve submits the ridiculous proposition that would have us believe that by raising interest rates to 20 percent, they will somehow or other slow down inflation.

Well, if that's true, why don't they just raise interest rates to 40 or 50 percent and wipe out inflation entirely?

Blasts school board

Dear Editor:

For almost 32 years I have seen school boards come and school boards go.

Some have been good, some have not been so good, some indifferent, but never have I encountered a board which did not have the good manners and common courtesy to acknowledge and answer the classified employees' letters written to it over these many months.

The board's silence has indicated only one attitude — that it doesn't care about the feelings of the classified employees, who literally run the schools.

We earnestly hope that we can still establish a friendly relationship with the board members in resolving some of our problems. I am sure the board would find

Private mail service approved by planners

By JOANNE HODGEN

A PRIVATE MAIL service was given a stamp of approval by the Carmel Planning Commission when it met Wednesday, Dec. 17.

An application for the Mail Box of Carmel had been continued by the Business License and Code Review Board Dec. 4. John Carney, owner of the Mailbox in Monterey, was told the mail service is not listed in the Planning and Zoning Code, thus is not allowed.

Planning Director Bob Griggs told Carney it would be permitted if the business were classified as a "messenger service."

Because the definition was hazy, Griggs said he wanted the Planning Commission to determine the category.

Carney told the commissioners Dec. 17 that in addition to mail boxes, the business would offer United Parcel Service pick-up and delivery, mail holding and forwarding, a telephone message service and a phone-in service which allows customers to check whether they have mail or packages.

Objections were raised by Commissioner Anne Woolworth to possible traffic problems created by the business.

Commissioner John Logan noted that parking was available at Sunset Center. Robert Stephenson, commission chairman, said traffic would merely be diverted from the post office to the new business.

Griggs told the commission that the question it was addressing was the business category. "The thing before you is whether it is a messenger service," he said.

The commission voted 5-2 to list the business as a messenger service, with Sandy Swain and Mrs. Woolworth opposed.

In other Planning Commission action:

• A request by Merv Sutton of Nielsen Bros. Market on the northeast corner of San Carlos and Seventh for an exterior awning along San Carlos was approved 7-0.

• A sign application from Carmel Insurance Company at the same corner was denied 4-3, with Stephenson, Mrs. Woolworth and Miss Swain supporting it.

Other commissioners objected to its large size.

• A sign application from Toland Doud for the Doud Arcade on Ocean between San Carlos and Dolores was approved 7-0, with a condition the sign's white stenciling be changed to white-beige.

• A sign application for Main St. Memories on the west side of Mission between Fifth and Sixth was approved 7-0.

• The commission agreed that any arcade or trellis work behind the legal lot setbacks that does not exceed 150 square feet be allowed. The vote was 6-1, with Mrs. Woolworth opposed.

City staff had asked the commission to determine the size allowed for enforcement purposes. The planning code had been unclear about the coverage permitted. The policy is temporary until an ordinance is written.

• The commission also referred a policy study of lot coverage and side yard setbacks to the Land Use Committee.

• Marshall Hydorn, who built a deck around a hot tub without a permit, has asked the commission to modify the planning ordinance limiting lot size.

He has asked that decks which do not exceed the height of the first floor be allowed to extend into a side yard setback, but no closer than three feet to the side line.

He has also asked that decks at the first-floor level not be counted as building coverage.

PG&E warns of bogus audits

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. is warning its customers in the area to beware of people who represent themselves as PG&E employees or as persons sent by PG&E.

District Manager Joe Cowan said there have been recent cases in the area of people attempting to schedule unauthorized home energy audits.

Customers who are approached by anyone claiming to be from PG&E should demand identification. If the person does not have proper identification, the customer should notify the police or Sheriff's Department and the Monterey PG&E office, he said.

All PG&E employees carry a plastic laminated identification card bearing the employee's name, birthdate, Social Security number and photo.

THE IMPACT OF EXTERNAL APPEAL

The external appearance of your home has an important impact on potential buyers. You will never get a prospect interested unless he wants to look further. Don't rely on the inside of your home "selling" it. Your prospect may be "turned off" before he reaches the front door. So look at the exterior with a critical eye.

Give the house a fresh coat of paint if needed. Replace any broken or cracked windows. Replace loose shingles. Fix the fence. Keep the lawn mowed and the shrubs trimmed to give your house that "well-cared-for" look. Make sure your screen door, if you have one, is in top shape and your wooden door is inviting with a fresh coat of paint or varnish. It is not uncommon to see a hundred dollars worth of improvements and some elbow grease increase the value of a house over a thousand dollars.

Put yourself in the buyer's shoes. He is looking for charm, comfort, location and a bargain. Give him the best show for the money.

Gala celebrations for New Year's Eve on the peninsula

A variety of celebrations will ring in the New Year on the Monterey Peninsula. Many fine restaurants will serve New Year's Eve dinners, theaters will stage special performances, and enthusiastic celebrants will be seen dancing on Peninsula dance floors and singing in the nightclubs. Because most restaurants and theaters require reservations, phone early to avoid disappointment.

At Andres in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, a special gourmet dinner will be prepared for that evening and served between 6 and 10 p.m. The cocktail lounge will be open until 1 a.m., with party favors and champagne toasts at midnight. Reservations required: 625-0447.

The regular menu will be served on that night at The General Store, Junipero and Fifth, Carmel, until 11 p.m. Revelers may then enjoy an uninhibited evening at the Forge in the Forest, adjacent to The General Store. Hors d'oeuvres will be served all evening and, at midnight, colorful hats and horns will welcome the New Year.

The renowned Sardine Factory on Wave Street above Cannery Row, Monterey, will serve its regular menu to New Year's Eve diners for extended hours, 5 p.m. to midnight. The bar will be open until 2 a.m. Reservations required: 373-3775.

The Safari Club at the Ramada Inn, 1425 Munras Ave., Monterey, will present the band Gemini from 9 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. The bar will be open from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. There is no cover charge and the traditional party favors will be available for all.

Merrymakers may indulge in free champagne and 75 cent Kamakasi cocktails served from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. at Sly McFly's Refueling Station, 708 Cannery Row, Monterey. There is no cover charge, and party favors are free.

The Pine Inn at Ocean and Monte Verde will present a lavish cold and hot buffet for New Year's Eve celebrants. Included in the hot buffet are Roast New York Strip Loin, Rack of Lamb, Steamed King Crab Legs, Coq Au Vin (chicken in wine sauce), Potatoes Au Gratin, Green Beans Almondine, Artichoke Bottoms with Baby Peas, sauteed carrots and parsnips, saffron rice, and, for dessert, cheesecake, Napoleon eclairs, fresh tarts, fruit salad, a cheese tray, coffee, tea, or milk, and a complimentary glass of champagne. There are two seatings: 7 and 9:30 p.m. The sumptuous feast is $20 per person for adults and $10 for children under 10. Reservations required: 624-3851.

An array of special events is planned at the Doubletree Inn, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey, on New Year's Eve and Day. Peter B's on the Alley will be open that night for two seatings, one at 6:30, the other at 9:30 p.m. An open menu will be served at the first seating, and the 9:30 p.m. seating is a gala dinner, including choice of five entrees, party favors, and two glasses of champagne each for $50 per couple. The cost includes tax and tip. Reservations are urged: 649-4511.

Party-prone persons may move upstairs where they can enjoy the music of Skylark in the Brasree Lounge. Party favors and chips and dip will be available from 8:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. The cost is $5 per person, and reservations are accepted: 649-4511.

Enjoy a lavish brunch on New Year's Day in the Brasree Lounge from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The expansive fare will cost $9.25 for adults and for children under 12, half price.

A 19th century melodrama, Working Girl's Wrongs, will be staged by the Troupers of the Gold Coast at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific streets, Monterey, as a special New Year's treat. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Following the play, a traditional olio or aftershow of songs and skits will be staged by the troupers. Tickets are $4, adults; $3, ages 13 to 19, and $2 for those under 13. For reservations, phone 376-4916 after 1 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday.

At the Wharf Theater on Old Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey, a special presentation of the radio musical On The Air will be performed on New Year's Eve, with an Italian buffet style dinner for $20 per person. The production begins at 8:30 p.m. and the partying will ensue until all hours of the night. This is also a final performance of the play. Reservations are required.

A special performance of Bell, Book and Candle, a delightful story of modern-day witches and warlocks, will be staged at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant, Dolores and Seventh, Carmel. After dinner a 45-minute variety show will be staged. Party favors and champagne will be included in the deal. Dinner, both shows, and champagne and party favors are offered for $25. This will be the final performance of Bell, Book and Candle. For reservations, phone 624-1661.

SHIELDS SLOOPS, 30-foot one-design boats modeled after America's Cup racing sloops, except half the size, will compete in the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club eighth annual Christmas Race Sunday, Dec. 28 from Wharf 2 on the Monterey Bay.

Yacht Club schedules Annual Christmas Race

Colorful sails will dot Monterey Bay when the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club presents the eighth annual Christmas Race Sunday, Dec. 28. Nearly 30 racing sloops will slice through the Bay when they begin the 12-mile race at 1 p.m. off Fisherman's Wharf No. 2, Monterey.

Though the course is not determined until race morning because of unpredictable winds, the best viewing is generally found at Wharf No. 2 and along Cannery Row, Monterey and at Lovers Point, Pacific Grove.

The event is considered a fun race by the skippers and crews and a warm-up for the spring Perry Cup series which begins in February. Three classes of racing boats will compete: A, large boats, 32 feet and longer; B, shorter sailing boats; and Shields, 30-foot one-design boats modeled after America's Cup racing sloops though, half the length.

The speed of the vessels is enhanced by the skillful spinaker piloting of experienced skippers and crews.

For additional information, phone 372-9686.

Fine California champagnes for holiday celebrating

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

DOUBLE-DIGIT INFLATION is doing more than skyrocketing prices on everything from the solid earth and its products, to everything we touch and even dream about.

There is something rather shattering about the reality of the new prices one discovers. Luxuries become the real meaning of that word, an extravagant indulgence.

When I was very young, in the era of Prohibition, champagne was a legendary beverage. The word had an aura of its own, bespeaking elegance and the ultimate in the heights of perfection. Like a Rolls-Royce, it was costly, setting it apart from other wines. One could read about it, and there were an elite few who experienced it on festive occasions when a few bottles would appear furtively from illegal private hoards.

Following repeal, as my career moved into wine merchandising, champagne became a commodity still reserved for special occasions, but quite frankly of not prohibitive price. Even the French Champagnes of grande marque, of famous names — Mumm's Cordon Rouge, Veuve Clicquot, Piper Heidsieck, Moët & Candon's Dom Perignon, Laurent Perrier Grand Siecle, Roederer Cristal, Taittinger, Bollinger and Krug — could ornament frequent gatherings. But the prices on those wines now become shockers! Their costs are moving them into those almost unattainable brackets, where one thinks of them as real luxuries.

A FEW WEEKS ago, I was invited to a tasting of "top of the line" French Champagnes presented by the news and information bureau of the Champagne Growers Association.

I learned, in the conference after the luncheon, some of the reasons for the current soaring levels sending such wines into the stratospheric realms. Never mind the limited area of production, nor even the sophistication of the true methode champenoise hand-turning and deluxe vinification, nor even the disastrous short crops of 1978 and 1980; the price of $5,000 per ton for premium Chardonnay and Pinot noir grapes makes it understandable.

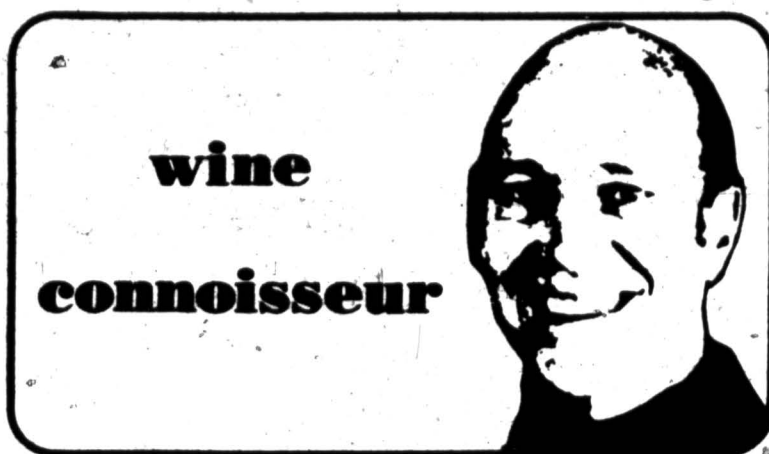

That's three times as much, or more, than Chardonnay grapes of the most premium lots obtained in California. Upward pressure from French growers, economically damaged by those two short crop years, has pointed to prevailing increases lagging behind the cost-of-living index figures. There has been, of course, a counter pressure here from our deregulated wine markets, making price wars a boon to the consumer, asking for lower prices on French Champagnes, which will not happen. All of which leads me to the reality that makes French bubbly the ultimate luxury of the legendary status I gave it in my youth.

Christmas and New Year's being the time for thoughts of extravagant indulgence, for gift giving, or marking moments in memory, here are a few suggestions beyond Dom Perignon, albeit in the same price category.

On each of my visits to Reims, after a tour of the Taittinger Comtes de Champagne cellars with Claude Taittinger, I've lunched at his Chateau de Marqueterie, an 18th-century villa nestled in the rolling hills of the Champagne countryside. Hectares of Chardonnay vines, and Pinot noir, turning different colors in the autumn, give reason for the name of the chateau.

Always, the vin de reception is the same, a vintage Champagne Brut Rose. It is Claude Taittinger's favorite wine. The current release, Comtes de Champagne Taittinger 1973

Champagne Brut Rose, has a suggested retail price of $55. When I expressed some degree of shock to the New York distributor, he countered with, "Look at the price of a Mercedes!"

Dom Perignon, when it can be found in New York, is $45 to $75 a bottle. So what can you expect from this Champagne Rose? Why is it so expensive? Not only is it the pride of Taittinger Champagnes, but it is of a good vintage, of 100 percent Pinot noir grapes from high parity vineyards in Bouzy. It's all first pressing, the engaging color from just the exact skin contact to give it that beautiful pink blush. Tiny beads of bubbles thread through the wine, which is soft, dry and seductively fragrant. Champagnes are sometimes rather austere. This is not. Each sip invites the next. You know, with the first wonderful mouthful, that this is really what the legend is all about.

Kobrand Corp., which imports Taittinger Champagnes, well knows that the market for French bubbly is not all geared to those high-priced wines.

Enter Bouvet Brut, a scintillating sparkling wine from the Loire Valley, made in the same methode champenoise, bottle-fermented techniques, but of 100 percent Chenin Blanc grapes. It sells for about $9 a bottle. The cork pops with the same resounding signal for festive occasions. It makes a wonderful Sunday luncheon wine. For many who can remember the charm of the Loire Valley castles and chateaus, there is the lovely nostalgia of this garden land of Saumur. Good value here.

To French purists, there is no such thing as "California Champagne." But we do produce good sparkling wines in the methode champenoise time-honored, bottle-fermented technique. Not quite as luxuriously priced, but thoroughly delightful are those of Schramsberg, Domaine Chandon, Korbel, Hanns Kornell, Sonoma Vineyards, Almaden, Beaulieu, Paul Masson and Chateau St. Jean. We're looking forward to Piper-Sonoma, the California-French connection of Piper Heidsieck with Rod Strong of Sonoma Vineyards. All of those good California sparklers are $9 to $12, and are appropriate for all those occasions for which you might choose the big French wine, but without that bite into the wallet.

In bottom-line candor, the difference between French and California Champagnes does exist. French vines draw an inimitable something from those 64,000 acres of chalky soil and Kimeridgian clay not available to our vines.

Fine French Champagnes are without peer; inflation has made the luxury give meaning to the word and the wine.

hour earlier on Sunday.

The theater also plans a special New Year's Eve performance Wednesday, Dec. 31, at 8:30 p.m., followed by a 45-minute variety show. Dinner, both shows, party favors, and champagne will bring in the New Year at $25 per person.

Asilomar hike set Saturday

The Sierra Club invites one and all to join in two hikes this week. The first will be a walk up the urban trail from Asilomar to Monterey to work off Christmas calories Saturday, Dec. 27. The second will be Sunday, Dec. 28 — a moderately strenuous hike of 8 miles to Mt. Manuel.

The Asilomar hike will be about four miles long one way. Participants should wear stout shoes, bring water and a lunch, or plan to purchase lunch at Fisherman's Wharf or Heritage Harbor. Meet on Sunset Drive near the Beachcomber Inn on Asilomar Beach at 10 a.m. Leaders for this trip are Chet and Bev Gadaire, 375-8995.

The hike to Mt. Manuel will include an elevation gain of 3,380 feet and is recommended for hikers in good condition. The summit has very fine views in all directions and is an inspiring place for the leisurely lunch break. Bring a lunch, plenty of water, and wear hiking boots. Meet at Brinton's in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Carmel at 7:30 a.m. to car pool for the 28-mile drive to Big Sur. Suggested driver reimbursement is $2. For more information, phone leader Richard Segal, 373-5983.

Season's Greetings With best wishes for a joyful New Year

We wish to thank all of you in the community for your kind words about Rancho Laureles Equestrian Center and its place in the lifestyle of Carmel Valley.

The response to our facility has been overwhelming; our barns are full. There is a waiting list for box stalls. (Well, we can still accept horses in private paddocks.)

Doug Downing, our talented riding instructor, has won many new friends in the few months he has been here. Although most days the lesson book is pretty full, he still has room for new students and would be happy to work out a riding program to suit your needs and individual schedule.

Our next major project will be landscaping and tree-planting, so our neighbors will continue to see changes and improvements as they drive past.

From all of us, sincerest wishes for the holiday season.

Bird count scheduled for Dec. 30

Those interested in bird counting will soon have a field day as the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society sponsors another Christmas count Tuesday, Dec. 30.

Sometime around 3:30 a.m., the first of about 50 birders will start the count, listening for owls in Robinson Canyon, Carmel Valley, and on the outer reaches of a count circle stretching toward Salinas.

When the sun makes its appearance, about 6:45 a.m., the bulk of the birders will spread out over the 15-mile diameter circle, centered on Jacks Peak, near the Monterey Peninsula Airport, to cover their assigned areas. They will tally as many species and individuals as possible before the rapidly closing dark, about 5 p.m., the close of a long day of birding.

About 6 p.m., the birders will assemble at compiler Bill Reese's home for a warm bite to eat, swapping stories about "the ones that got away," and the ones that didn't.

Around 7 p.m., the list of how many species were seen will be tallied, sometimes to groans of disappointment — (You mean nobody saw a ... ?) The usual gasps of surprise or even wonder will be heard — (Where did you see that?) and, finally, the surprises: the assembled parties letting others in on those birds which no one expected. These announcements are closely questioned about details.

The total is then announced. Some who have come from afar will start home; others will stay to chat exhaustedly, too tired to move and too happy to let the glow of yet another Monterey Christmas count fade.

Last year, the group tallied

194 species and 59,319 individuals to rank sixth in the nation in total species found.

How can you participate? Contact Bill Reese, who will assign you to a party. After spending the day looking and tallying, the participant will submit a list with the publication fee of $1.50 per participant at the end of the day. Another way to participate is as a feeder watcher.

For further information on either the Christmas count or feeder watching, contact Bill Reese at 375-2740.

Country-western musicians wanted

High school students with country-western talent are invited to participate in a benefit concert for the Monterey County MUD Squad, 1 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 28 at the Salinas Community Center. The concert will feature music from Cimmaron, High Country, The Country Gentlemen, Sammy Dee and Co. and the Get Down Country Band.

Prizes will be awarded to the best solo and group performance among the high school players, and door prizes will be offered by local merchants. A $5 donation is requested, and tickets are available at Abinante's Music Store in Monterey and at Gadsby's Music Store and Salinas Western Store in Salinas.

Everyone is invited to attend. The Salinas Community Center is at 940 N. Main Street.

ROCKY CREEK RANCH— BREATH-TAKING VIEWS—OVER 600 ACRES, SOUTH OF CARMEL

On a clear day you can see forever (almost). The ocean view goes north past Santa Cruz! There are fine, closer ocean views of Bixby Creek Bridge and Division Knoll, and beautiful views of the mountains all around. A good portion of the property is either almost flat or gently sloping; some of it is quite steep. The vegetation is outstanding—groves of Redwoods, huge Oak trees, areas of Chaparral, Madrone, Manzanita and Grease Wood. Rocky Creek touches one corner of the property. There are perhaps dozens of large, practical level building sites on this magnificent acreage, one being an over 100-acre meadow. All this and much, much more is yours for $2,000,000. The owner will finance with terms open to negotiation.

Musical offerings nourish the spirit of the season

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

A SEARCH THROUGH the history of music literature will turn up surprisingly few masterpieces on the subject of Christmas.

Even the great Bach, in the Christmas Oratorio, seems stumped on reconciling the pastoral birth of Jesus with the exaltation of the coming of Christ.

Still it is music, more deeply than any other art, that contains the power to transcend the Christmas of the business crunch and to touch the Christmas of the spirit. And perhaps because the real professionals of music-making are themselves overdo on professional commitments that it is during the Christmas season that the semi-pros emerge to address a noble tradition and, for many of us, a real need.

To those who have been nourished by the music offerings of last week I can offer little more than envy.

At Community Hospital last Friday afternoon a band of 14 players, members of the Monterey County Symphony, were led from the piano by Haymo Taeuber in a pastiche of Tchaikovsky, Bizet, Grieg, Strauss and others that delighted, as the printed program said, patients, visitors and staff. The Maurine Church Coburn fund guaranteed the performance, which featured lilting soprano solos by Caterina Micieli. The pavilion concert attracted increasing numbers to its delights as the afternoon drew nigh.

THAT SAME EVENING saw the inauspicious official opening of an immature Hidden Valley season of chamber music at Monterey's Presbyterian Church.

The problems were twofold: The ensembles mixed skill with inexperience, and overall preparation with insufficient training.

Considering that all of the participating musicians were paid for their CETA functions, it was hard to justify the weakest playing and harder still to justify the mismatch of abilities. Hidden Valley continues to recruit for several more positions as yet unfilled, though CETA prerequisites can be unforgiving, often for absurd reasons.

A combination of lack of experience and lack of curiosity sapped the first half of the evening. Violinist David Dalley, though a promising talent, was consumed with the printed note, and Stewart Robertson, at the piano, was heavy on key and pedal for the Suite for Violin, Clarinet and Piano by Milhaud.

The music, drawn from the 1930s film The Traveler Without Bags, also featured Craig Olzenak, principle clarinet with the Monterey County Symphony. The piece was consumed in non-apprehension; it ranged between grasping note values (violin), Germanic sonorities (piano) and inhibited windism (clarinet). Its wit and Gallic sprightliness remained on the page.

The Rossini Duo for Cello and String Bass fared little better. While composed in the opera-buffa style of Rossini's numerous comedies, the humor of the music was contained and ignored by the strict and literal realization of cellist Liz Van Loon. Ms. Van Loon, also a Monterey County Symphony player, revealed again, as last season with Hidden Valley, poor intonation in her instrument's high tessitura. Don Nelson's bass playing was workaday but polished early on and grew increasingly witty and spirited in the finale.

In the Mozart Flute Quartet in C, K. 285b the contradiction of skills was extreme. Flutist Gail Veslage will be a pleasure to hear again. She approached the delightful score with gentleness and seriousness, the latter expression possibly a reflection of the unwieldy and insensitive string playing that she was required to lead. Ms. Veslage achieved felicitous phrasing and tone and singularly brought her music to life. The stringers (pardon me) matched neither the purpose nor the skill of the flutist. Violinist Ruth Kaufman played with poor intonation, poor rhythm and obtrusive coarseness of sound. Linn Van Meter, viola, also sounded inexperienced but sensible and in proportion. And Ms. Van Loon, for her experience, could have offered more strength and security to the ensemble.

The three humorless readings led up to the great Piano Quintet in E flat, Op. 44 by Schumann. Overlooking the fact that these players are all supposed to be professionals, and recalling that Hidden Valley's original purpose was to be a training ground, this reading was an ideal experience for the still green abilities of Dally, Ms. Kaufman and Ms. Van Meter. Surrounding them were the fluent propulsion and authority of pianist Robertson and solid confidence and serene self-possession of cellist Carmen Martin. While the three younger players were at times not up to its demands, the music progressed nicely and, in the scherzo and final allegro movements, gained considerable cohesion and spirit. The evening did at last step beyond its earlier doldrums and arrive at a hefty level of performance and communication.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON at the Kelley Gallery in Monterey, Robertson was once again at the piano, this time as accompanist to baritone Richard Steen.

Steen, a choral conductor at a New York music school, made a Christmas offering of Bach, Wolf, Cornelius and several American song composers.

Displaying a smallish and not deeply developed voice, Steen songs by Hugo Wolf. Four of them were from the Spanisches Liederbuch, one from a poem by Morike and all about Christ. Most of them were Christmas related, though at turns were references to the crucifixion. Those were the best pieces of the program, and Steen gave them thoughtfully explored readings that brought his personality and singing into more focus and color.

The Christmas Songs, Op. 8 by German Peter Cornelius followed. Those plain but tasteful lieder, sung in English, are the composer's best known works, and Steen sang them nicely and in keeping with their light character.

Features of the last set were two songs by Ives (Little Star of Bethlehem was subtle and tasty with mischievous Ivesian rhythms), a Ned Rorem arrangement of a 15th century Christmas melody, a chromatically pungent Edna St. Vincent Millay setting by Allan DiBiase (the hard-bitten To Jesus on His Birthday) and John Corigliano's Christmas at the Cloisters, the most adventuresome song of the afternoon.

The large audience was warm in appreciation and, perhaps surprisingly, most responsive to the contemporary pieces.
